INTRODUCTION.

This Historic Genealogy will embrace in quite a wide field of research, not only the immediate family line of descent of the Title Name, from the first settlement thereof in this country, in 1738, but also historic interests of no little importance and value therewith, and various collateral alliances with other families which have wielded important influence in their day and generation during the formative period of the history of this country.

Between the years 1725 and 1770 there was large and continuous emigration to Pennsylvania from the Palatinate of South Germany. They were largely of a sturdy and industrial class—tillers of the soil—judges of good land, and consequently made choice of localities suitable to their vocation. They soon proved themselves a valuable addition to the Commonwealth by their honesty and their economic and persistent industry in subduing the new lands of their wise choice, to prosperous success and comfortable living. They also soon became known as a class by the name of “The Pennsylvania Germans,” whose descendants in large numbers, with the same class name and the same solid characteristics, still dominate the portions of the State where they first settled.

The Germans of the Palatinate were largely Protestant. They brought their strong religious faith with them, and to this day they form the bulk of the Lutheran Church in the State. Among them as Missionary Pioneers were Conrad Weiser, Henry Melchior Muhlenburg, and John Casper Stoeber, Sr., and John Casper Stoeber, Jr., who ministered well and faithfully for many years among their people in the eastern counties of the State, and with whom were marriage alliances of the Ege line.

The Ege family of Wurtemberg is a very old one. Among them have been those prominent in Civil and Political life, and in Professional and Literary vocations. There is said to be a tombstone of one who was the Burgomeister of the Town of Another of the name was a well-known scholarly Litterateur of his day.

Recent researches show that there are still four leading family lines of the name in the Province, which no doubt can be traced to the One Source.

During the early emigration to this country, and at intervals later, others of the same family name have settled here. Some of these the author has met, and with others has had correspondence.

FOREWORDS.

I.

During the period of the German Emigration there arrived at Philadelphia September 20th, 1738, from the Province of Wurtemberg, via Rotterdam, Holland, in the ship "Nancy and Friendship," in command of Captain William Wallace, a father and four sons, as follows:

I Bernhard Egeage 50 years

SONS.

1. Jacob Egeage 25 years
2. George-Michael Ege " 23 "
3. Adam Ege " 13 "
4. Martyn Ege " 11 "

NOTE.

George-Michael was recorded as a widower.

—From Emigrant Records, in Phila. Hist. Soc.

A legend, of which no certified data has been found, says there was a daughter Margaret, and that George-Michael had been married to a first cousin, who died at childbirth, and that the sister, Margaret, had the care of the infant child of her brother.

Nor has any after knowledge been obtained as to where the father, Bernhard, passed the rest of his days, but most probably with his older sons alternately in Virginia and Philadelphia.

II.

A few days later there also arrived in Philadelphia from Hesse-Cassel, General Nicholas Scheerer, wife and family. Among them a daughter, Maria Dorothea. The wife of General Scheerer had been a Lady of the Court at Hesse-Cassel, in waiting to the Queen. The Queen had been God-Mother at the baptism of the daughter, Maria Dorothea, and had presented to her a Golden Bowl used at the Baptism. The Court dress of the mother, and the Golden Bowl were preserved in the family and among descendants for many years as valuable "Heirlooms."

The Ege and Scheerer families meeting together thus soon after their arrival became intimate friends. An attachment and engagement soon followed between Jacob Ege, the oldest son, and Maria Dorothea, the daughter. The destination of the Scheerer family was the James River Settlements of Virginia.

FOREWORDS.

Jacob decided at once to cast his lot with his new friends, and so followed his fiancee. Arriving there they learned of a new city having just been planned on the lands of Colonel Wm. Byrd, on the upper James River, to be called Richmond. Visiting the site they decided to settle there, and immediately proceeded to purchase lots and build a Home for the Bride.

III.

George-Michael Ege, the second son, remained in Philadelphia. He soon became acquainted with other German families; among them a then already prominent one by the name of Hölz the German for "Wood," which a few years later the family adopted as their English name, and by which a large line of descendants are known to this day. Of this family, George-Michael married the daughter Anna Catarina Hölz-in—the "in" being the feminine termination to the name.

IV.

In 1750 a wealthy German Baron, Heinrich Wilhelm Stiegel, from Mannheim, Germany, landed in Philadelphia. In the autumn of 1758 the Baron married as his second wife, Elizabeth Hölz-in, sister of Anna Catarina, the wife of George-Michael Ege.

V.

Adam Ege, the 13-year-old and third son, found a home in New Jersey, to learn the manners and customs of the new land, and also to learn to be a farmer. His new friends were John Hobbs and wife, of Amwell Township, Hunterdon County. They became friends indeed; gave him a good education for the times, and in 1759, being without children, for a small sum in hand, they gave him, as their heir, deed for the home and farm. His brother, Martyn Ege, and the fourth son, was witness to this deed at the date above-mentioned. The only other mention of this youngest brother was in connection with Adam, in a list of taxables in Reading, Pennsylvania, in 1757, for a joint property there, where it is to be believed the youngest brother settled, but of which fact, or any further data, diligent research has failed to verify.

VI.

From these beginnings in this country there has followed a long line of descendants, and much interesting and associated history. The Genealogy of the three sons—Jacob, in Virginia; George-Michael, in Pennsylvania, and Adam, in New Jersey—will follow in this order.

"OLD STONE HOUSE," RICHMOND, VA.

Built by Jacob Ege 1738-39.

INTRODUCTION

TO

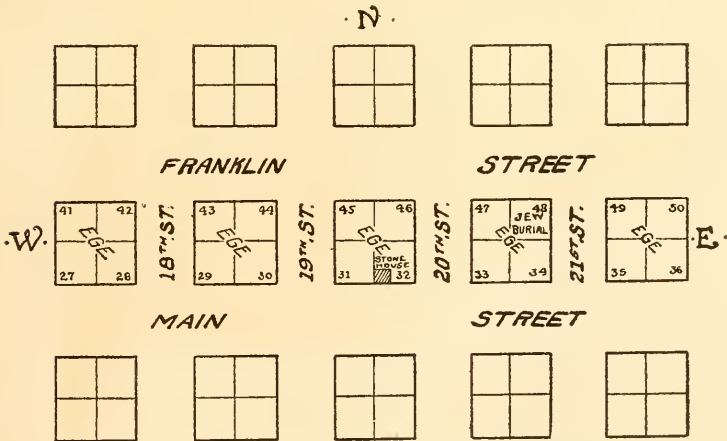

HISTORY OF JACOB EGE, HEAD OF VIRGINIA BRANCH.

Jacob Ege, Sr., eldest son of Bernhard Ege, of the Province of Wurtemberg, Germany, landed in Philadelphia with his father and brothers in 1738. He proceeded at once to Virginia to seek a home, and soon decided to settle in the newly planned City of Richmond. He took up several lots on the northern side of Main street, extending to Franklin, as appear by later transactions, and supposed to extend from Seventeenth to Twenty-second streets.

He built his house about the middle of Lots Nos. 31-32, between Nineteenth and Twentieth streets. in 1738-39.

This building has long been designated as "The Old Stone House," concerning which several very interesting historical accounts have been written, some of which here follow.

HISTORIC SKETCHES OF "THE OLD STONE HOUSE."

From "Lossing's Field Book of the Revolution," Vol. II., p. 232, Copyrighted 1850. Pub. by Harper and Brothers.

On my way from St. John's Church I sketched the City Tavern and the "Old Stone House," which was the first dwelling erected in Richmond and among the houses there which was spared by the incendiary fire in 1781. The "Old Stone House" built by Jacob Ege is cherished in the affections of the citizens of Richmond "as the first dwelling erected within the city limits."

It was occupied by Mrs. Elizabeth Welsh, whose grandfather built it before Byrd's Warehouse was erected.

"It was next owned by Mrs. Welsh's father, Samuel Ege, who was a Commissary in the American Army during the War of the Revolution. Washington, Jefferson, Madison, and Monroe have all been beneath its roof.

Mrs. Welsh informed me that she well remembered when Monroe boarded with her mother while attending the Virginia Convention in 1788.* She was then ten years of age. Mrs. Welsh also related a circumstance which she well remembered. "While Monroe boarded with her mother, Samuel Hardy, another member of the Convention, did also. Hardy was a very modest, retiring man. One morning at breakfast Monroe remarked to Hardy in a jocular manner, 'I have no doubt you will be Governor of the State yet.' 'Yes,' rejoined Hardy, 'and you will have your hair qued and be sent to Congress.'"

Hardy was afterward Lieutenant Governor of the State, and Monroe was not only sent to Congress, as a Senator, but became also a Foreign Minister and Chief Magistrate of the Nation.—Benson Lossing.

* Samuel Scheerer, a brother of Mrs. Jacob Ege, was a member of this convention.

VIRGINIA BRANCH.

From "Historical Collections of Virginia," by Henry Howe in 1852.

"The Old Stone House" so-called, and then over a century old, was built by Jacob Ege, 1738-39.

It is situated on the northern side of Main Street, a few rods below the Market. It was one of the first, if not the first, built in Richmond, after the laying out of the city by Major William Mayo, April 1737.

It is the property of Mrs. Elizabeth Welsh (1852) and has been in the same family from its beginning.

Jacob Ege, her grandfather, was a German, and settled on this spot when there were few or no inhabitants on the site of the town, and previous to the erection of Byrd's Warehouse.

When President Monroe was a young man attending school in Richmond he boarded with Mrs. Samuel Ege. Samuel Ege, the father of Mrs. Elizabeth Welsh, resided in this house during the Revolution. At that time it was one of the best houses in Richmond.

It has been honored by visits of Washington, Jefferson, Madison, Henry, Lafayette, and other distinguished personages. This part of the town was first settled, and it gradually extended to the Capitol, which was commenced in 1780. When the British under Arnold invaded Richmond in 1781, Mr. Ege was absent on duty as Commissary in the American Army.

The first his wife knew of their approach was seeing a body of cavalry galloping down Richmond Hill, then much steeper than at present (1752). She described it "as the most beautiful sight she ever witnessed." One of their officers was quartered in her house.* The soldiers broke open the stores and emptied liquors and provisions in the streets and gutters. The cows and hogs drank of the liquors and were seen staggering about the streets.

From "Richmond in By-gone Days," Mordecai, 1st edition, 1856, p. 33.

Among the most respectable residences in point of age and appearance of which Richmond can boast is the "Old Stone House" in Main street, which dates probably A. U. C. and what is more remarkable, has always been in the Ege family.

In answer to an inquiry the Editor of the Richmond Times-Dispatch adds:

Mr. Mordecai lived in the middle portion of the XIXth century and from his equivocal A. U. C. left the age of the venerable building in doubt. An old gentleman tells us that his father remembered the building of the house and that the stones of its supporting walls were brought from the James River, in the state of undressed granite boulders. In the opinion of some there were as old, if not older, houses standing upright in Richmond at that time (1856), and that some of these carried an age before that of either the town or city. These were of wood and of Dutch design.

* This fact, no doubt, saved her house from the incendiary.

EGE GENEALOGY.

NOTE.

Jacob Ege, the builder, and early settler in Richmond, came there in 1738, the next year after the plan for a town was surveyed for Col. Wm. Byrd, Jr., who had inherited the large body of land granted by King James, of England, to his father. Much of this land was under cultivation and had been no doubt for years before the planning of the same for a town. Tenant houses were here and there for his laborers. Some of these laborers were Germans.

An old family record says that the "Old Stone House" was the fifth house built on this land. The late James Lawrence Ege, who died in 1903, in his 87th year, and the last of the Ege name resident in Richmond, said very frequently in the memory of his family, "that the stones (of which the house was built) were ballast thrown on the shore of the river from vessels coming to load with tobacco at Manchester, and therefore deposited their ballast on the opposite shore."—T. P. E.

NOTE.

There is a stone of good shape and proportion in the "Old Stone House," placed on a line with the lintel of the window, left side of the entrance and beneath the eaves, on which is inscribed a Monogram composed of a Cross and the two letters IR combined—thus, †R—evidently meaning James Rex—King James. How, when, and why, this marked stone found a place there is an interesting query?

The German Builder (if so?) was not a subject of King James, and at that late day, 1738, could have had no reason for so placing such a stone, unless by chance.

According to the well-established tradition, that stones for the building were gathered from the shore of the river, may not this stone have been gathered up with the rest, having doubtless long fallen from its place, and when discovered as being so marked, placed in this special position for better preservation?

VIRGINIA BRANCH.

And so, also, may it not have been the stone so marked in honor of his God and King by John Smith at the time of his exploration of the River to this point?

The "Old Stone House" is still owned by descendants of the Ege family, and when it shall pass out of their possession, "it is devoutly to be wished that it shall come into the care and keeping of 'The Association for the Preservation of Virginia Antiquities.'"—T. P. E., 1911.

REFERENCES AND EXPLANATIONS.

LINES OF DESCENT.

The number preceding each name designates its place in the order of birth of the family name, next following to the end of the line, as follows:

1. Thompson P. Ege, 1. Oliver, 3. Michael, Jr., 5. Michael, Sr., 2. George-Michael, I Bernhard.

1. Thompson is the first child of 1. Oliver, of 3. Michael, Jr., of 5. Michael, Sr., of 2. George-Michael, of I Bernhard.

Counting from right to left, the place held by each name in the line designates the generation to which said name belongs. Thus, Thompson is found in Gen. VI.

NUMBERING AND INDEXING.

When Numbers in parenthesis, connected by hyphen, precede the name beginning a family group, the first is the Index Number, referring to the original family group in which it first occurs, and the Number after the hyphen its place or order in said original family group.

In enumerating a family group, the Number next under the parenthesis is the Index Number of husband or wife, and leads the family—thus, Oliver (483-1), wife 484 to 489-4—the 489-4 being Index Number of last child, and the 4 the number of Children in the family and the 4th child.

HISTORIC SKETCH.

In that early day the trade in tobacco had become a large and profitable business. The early shipping port was Manchester, opposite the City of Richmond, and now incorporated as part of the greater city. Jacob Ege, Sr., seeing that a co-ordinate branch of this business was a constant demand and a profitable one, established and conducted a large Cooperage Manufactory. This same business was still carried on by Jacob Galt Ege, a grandson.

The first record by deed of any transfer of property by Jacob Ege, Sr., was a half acre, viz., one-half of City Lots Nos. 32 and 46 of original city plan, between Main and Franklin streets, and on the east side of Twentieth Street, to George Scheerer, who was probably a brother of his wife. Jacob is named in this deed as cooper and Scheerer as joiner. Date of said deed, June 5, 1748, Henrico Court Records, 1748-70; pages 109-10.

About that time, or probably a little earlier, Lot No. 48 of original city plan, being a portion of Jacob Ege's early holdings, was either sold or conveyed for some consideration of friendship to Isaiah Isaacs, who in turn conveyed it for the "nominal consideration of five shillings current money of Virginia, in a deed of trust to Simon Gratz, Aaron Levi, Moses Jacobs, and Levi Myers, trustees, to be held by them for the purposes of burial of such Jews as then resided in Richmond; their families, and such as might be brought there from other points. The ground was never to be sold, rented or used for any other purpose."

The first witness (of whom there were five) to this document was Jacob Ege, Sr.,

In the fall of 1909 this old Burial Plot was thoroughly restored and re-dedicated in an occasion of great ceremony and interest.

NOTE.

In a later division of the Jacob Ege property Lot No. 34 of city plan, adjoining the cemetery lot on the south side, and fronting on Main Street, became the inheritance of Anna Ege, his youngest and only unmarried daughter.

"The last will and testament of Jacob Ege, Sr., bearing date the 2nd day of November, 1762, duly executed, proved, and recorded in the Court of Henrico County, Virginia, did devise that his wife, Dorothea, should possess and enjoy the two lots and houses in Richmond whereon they then lived, and other property, with the rents and profits thereof, and that after her decease the said lots and houses should be sold and divided equally among his surviving children."—Quoted.

The next record of the disposition of property is of date the 1st day of March, 1784, and was between Maria Dorothea Ege, relict and devisee of Jacob Ege, late of the town of Richmond, deceased; Samuel Ege, Jacob Ege, Jr., Gabriel Galt, and Elizabeth, his wife; David Lambert, and Sarah his wife; and Anna (Nancy) Ege, devisees of the said Jacob Ege, Sr., deceased, of the one part, and George Anderson, Esq., of Henrico County, Virginia, of the other part, for all that messuage or tenement situate in the City of Richmond known and distinguished by Lot No. 50, in the plan and draught of said city; consideration, Three hundred and Twenty-five pounds."—Quoted from Record Book, Vol. I., 1780-85, page 187, Henrico County Court.

From this it would appear that Jacob Ege, Sr., did not die for a number of years after the making of his will in 1762, and most probably not until early in 1784. From other evidence it appears that there had been other dispositions of property, of which records have been lost, as for example:

The fact of Lot No. 34 named as a boundary, in another transaction, at or near this same time, is mentioned as the property of Anna Ege, the youngest child of Jacob Ege, Sr.

VIRGINIA BRANCH.

The next Indenture of Record, of date July 31st, 1784, was a tripartite agreement; Samuel Ege, oldest son, and heir-at-law, of Jacob Ege, Sr., deceased, and Elizabeth, wife of the said Samuel of the first part; Gabriel Galt and Elizabeth his wife, David Lambert and Sarah his wife, and Anna (Nancy), spinster, which Elizabeth, Sarah, and Anna (Nancy) were daughters and devisees of said Jacob Ege, Sr., of the second part; and Jacob Ege, Jr., then of the City of Richmond, and son of Jacob Ege, Sr., deceased, of the third part; Witnesseth, that Whereas said Jacob Ege, Sr. did devise all his property to his wife Maria Dorothea until her decease; and Whereas the said Dorothea, now the widow of said Jacob Ege, Sr., is still living, and the estate devised to her still exists, and Whereas the aforesaid heirs at law are willing and desirous to transfer to the said Jacob Ege, Jr., all right and interest, together with all the estate which they or either of them now has, or at any time hereafter may have to the said devised estate, for and in consideration, as well as of the love and affection which they have and bear to their aforesaid brother Jacob Ege, Jr., and as of the sum of One Shilling current money of Virginia, to each of them by the said Jacob Ege, Jr., in hand paid at and before the sealing and delivery of these presents, they hereby sell, grant and release the two Lots 33 and 47 of the city plan of the City of Richmond, with all houses, buildings, and appurtenances thereunto belonging to the said Jacob Ege, Jr., his heirs and assigns."—Abbreviated from original deed.

This Deed was duly signed by all the heirs, except the Mother, who was still living. Consequently, Deed did not at once pass. It was witnessed by Samuel Scheerer, Richard Bowler, and Charles Lambert.

Written on the margin of the Original Indenture is the statement that this Indenture and Deed was delivered April 26th, 1787. The widow did not die until 1803. Hence, this must have been by her consent and order of the Court because of disability from advanced age.—Vol. I., 1780-85, page 267, Henrico County Court House Records.

In the next year, August 10th, 1785, Jacob Ege, Jr., and wife Elizabeth, deeded to David Lambert, his brother-in-law, subject to the same conditions of reserved deed, part of said Lots Nos. 33 and 47 of city plan, 33 feet front on Middle Street, now Franklin, adjoining Lot No. 48, Hebrew Cemetery, and extending through to Main Street, and adjoining Lot No. 44, of Anna Ege, ending with 33 feet on Main Street, for the sum of four hundred and seventy-five pounds.—Vol. II., page 97, Henrico County Records.

EGE GENEALOGY.

SKETCH.

A brief sketch of Jacob Ege, Jr., the youngest child and second son of Jacob, Sr., which in the regular order of descent should follow last, yet because of the fact that he was the first of the family to die, and leaving no heirs, it has seemed appropriate to add his brief history here.

Jacob Ege, Jr., m. a'b't 1785 Elizabeth Stubelfeld, the only daughter of John and Eva Stubelfeld, of James City County, Virginia. She was born October 25th, 1769.

The Stubelfeld family, of East Virginia, and in Stafford and Spottsylvania Counties, have been prominent both in social and official life.

Jacob Ege, Jr., was a man of energy and enterprise, highly esteemed by all who knew him, and greatly beloved by his family, as previously shown in the disposition of property. He was especially prominent and popular in Masonic circles, and with his brothers-in-law, Gabriel Galt and David Lambert, were deeply interested in the establishment of Masonry in Richmond, and in the projection and building the Masonic Hall on Franklin Street, which is still in good preservation and use by Richmond Randolph Lodge, No. 19, after more than a century.

David Lambert headed the list of Petitioners to the Grand Lodge of the State for a Charter, to form a New Lodge in Richmond. William Waddill was the first Master, and commenced his administration with three members besides himself—David Lambert as first secretary, John Dixon, Sr., and John V. Krautzman as Tiler. Jacob Ege, Jr., as the next Master, from 1789 to 1793. Again elected in 1795, during which he died while still in office.

The entire square in which the Masonic Lot is a part was the original property of Jacob Ege, Sr., and at the time of selecting a site for the building of the Masonic Hall it was under the life control and ownership of his widow. About this time the widow, being advanced in years, it appears, consented that her children should make a friendly allotment among themselves of the property, but under the condition of reserved Title Deeds while she lived, or until because of inability the Courts should permit such allotments to be confirmed and deeds approved.

The first agreement of this kind was made by mutual consent of all the heirs, as previously shown, to Jacob Ege, Jr., in 1784. About the same time similar agreements seem to have been made to other heirs, and Gabriel Galt and wife were allotted that portion, of which a building site, by donation or otherwise, was granted to the Trustees of the Lodge, on Aug. 10, 1785, under a penalty of 500 pounds, to grant a Deed in fee as soon as he was able. He died before such legal right was his. Ten years later the Courts finally took means to adjust the difficulty and confirm the title to the Masonic body.

Jacob's wife inherited his estate, and was executrix for its final settlement. Her inventory of accounts was audited, approved, and signed by C. Wills, John Enders and Jacob Galt Ege.

About 1800, Elizabeth Ege, his widow, married Captain Joseph A. Myers, U. S. Navy. She died very suddenly from a stroke of apoplexy, Jan. 11, A.D. 1829.

Her tombstone, a large marble slab on pedestals in Old St. John's Churchyard, records quite a history of her life. It says: "Deprived by death at a very early age of parental care, an orphan, she was committed to the care of her maternal uncle, and when about fourteen years of age removed with him to Richmond, where she continued to reside till death sealed her earthly existence."

SKETCH.

Samuel Ege inherited the "Old Stone House" and lots immediately pertaining thereto. He was Commissary of the American Army during the War of the Revolution. His wife, Elizabeth Walker, was an orphan from the hour of her birth. Her father, returning from the Court of Lunenburg County, was drowned in a stream, swollen by a recent storm, and in sight of his home. His wife, anxiously looking for him from a window, saw this disaster, and from the shock of this sad sight was thrown into convulsions, during which she gave birth to her first child, Elizabeth. She was taken and reared in the family of an uncle by marriage, Col. Thomas Prosser, in Brookfield, near Richmond. Her maternal line was Stokes, nee Stockton. (See "Stockton Arms.")

EGE GENEALOGY.

The following interesting Obituary, written by Bishop Richard Channing Moore, D.D., is worthy of a place in this family history:

"Died at her late residence on East Main Street on Thursday night, January 8th, 1829. Mrs. Elizabeth Walker Ege, in the 83rd year of her age. She was a native of Lunenburg Co., Virginia, and for the last seventy years a resident of Richmond. She left behind a large family of children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren. Devoted to her family, she spent little time elsewhere, and thus has it pleased God to take from its bosom unto Himself one of the oldest, if not the oldest, residents of this city. To say in common language that she was an affectionate wife, fond mother, indulgent and charitable mistress and exemplary woman, may be taken perhaps as mere words, as a matter of course, but not in any one of these relations has the busy tongue of slander ever whispered an objection to her conduct.

"Endowed by nature with an energetic and acute mind, she early learned that much of her usefulness depended upon her utility to minister comfort and relief to the diseased, and hundreds now living will attest how much they were indebted to her charitable prescriptions when in the infancy of our city medical advice was scarce and not readily to be obtained. Without any parade or show of piety, she was a devout believer in the merits of her Lord and Master Jesus Christ, and when in the day of her death, the Bishop, her Pastor, visited her and administered the Holy Communion, she firmly told him she fully relied on the love and mercy of her Redeemer, to whom she was then looking for comfort and consolation both in time and eternity. 'I heard a voice from Heaven, saying, Write, from henceforth blessed are the dead who die in the Lord, even so saith the Spirit, for they rest from their labors.'"

A touching tribute, written by a friend, name unknown, to the memory of Samuel H. Ege, son of Samuel and Elizabeth Walker Ege, who died shortly after the War of 1812-14, here follows:

"Died, after a short but severe illness, and in the prime of life, Ensign Samuel H. Ege, formerly of the Richmond Rifle Volunteers. During our late struggle he was several times compelled to take the tented field, and by brave comrades was considered as a benevolent and enterprising officer. He was a good citizen, a friend of the widow and orphan and always ready and willing, as far as in him lay, to render assistance to the miserable and unfortunate. If true repentance, if kind, gentle and unassuming manners can command a tear of sympathy, it must be shed o'er the grave which now contains his remains. In him a doting mother, whose best support he was, has to deplore the loss of a truly dutiful son; his sisters and brothers, the death of a kind and attentive relation, and his servants a humane and generous master."

This is no heightened panegyric, but a few lines simply inscribed to his memory by one who knew him well and now deeply and affectionately deplores his loss. "But his spirit has fled up to the stars, from whence it came, and his warm heart with all its generous and open vessels is compressed with a clod of the valley."

"Then let me pause, and think; alas! how soon
The hand of that same God may sweep me down,
Although with health I'm blest; 'but Man is dust;'
Some pitying bard may say,—'his spirit's gone."

When General LaFayette visited Richmond in 1824 he visited the "Old Stone House," then nearly a century old. He was entertained there with lemonade and cake. The Baby LaFayette (with his mother) was present, and was fondled by the General—whence the Baby's name.

SKETCH.

Jacob Galt Ege, during the years of his active life, was a very energetic man in various business ventures, as builder, speculator in City Lots and in the carrying on of a Cooperage Factory—a business handed down from his grandfather, Jacob. A Court Record, March 1st, 1804, names "Tom Adams, a Colored Boy, as apprenticed to Jacob G. Ege to learn the Cooper trade."

Diana Morgan, the mother of Jane B. Morgan, the wife of Jacob Galt Ege, deeded to said Jane B. Ege, January 18th, 1819, one-half acre of land, on G and 2nd Street, namely, Lot 78, on original Richmond plan, together with the mansion house, buildings and appurtenances thereunto belonging, for the sum of one dollar ($1.00) in hand paid by them—the same to be their property and home, unincumbered by leans, trust or sale, as long as either said Jane B. Ege or Jacob Galt Ege, her husband lived—after which it was to be sold and the proceeds divided equally among all living children.—Witnesses, F. Wicker and Samuel G. Adams.—Chancery Court Records, Book 15, Page 443.

estate, and the Commission to approve his accounts was appointed November, 1833.

This would indicate that he outlived his wife.

William Palmer, who married a daughter of John Enders, and granddaughter of Jacob Ege, Sr., purchased this property at the sale, and owned it for several years. It is now the property of the Roman Catholic Church and the Mansion House is the Home of a Sisterhood of the Church. The entire property is now surrounded by a high brick wall.

SKETCH.

The recent death (1903) of James Lawrence Ege will recall to the minds of the oldest citizens of Richmond that he was the last living male descendant of the name in our city, and a great-grandson of Jacob Ege, the early settler and builder of the historic "Old Stone House" in 1738-39. His parents were Jacob Galt Ege and Jane Brown Morgan Ege. He was one of a family of eight children, but the last one born in the "Old Stone House," August 25th, 1816. The friends and associates of the Ege family were of the very first families of Virginia, and their old home was always the scene of hospitality, mirth and gayety in those early days. The celebrities of the day and time often visited the old home, 'tho' so humble and unpreten-tious in appearance. James Monroe was an intimate friend of the family. General LaFayette, in 1824, was entertained beneath its roof. The youngest of the eight children mentioned, an infant in that year, was named LaFayette. Mr. James Lawrence Ege was for many years an expert Jeweler, and member of the firm of Mitchell & Tyler, until its dissolution. He lived to a ripe old age, being in his eighty-eighth year, and was buried in the family lot, in the Cemetery of Old St. John's Church, where, also, the vault of the Weymouth family, of Ege connection, is situated.

Mr. Ege was a type of the true old Virginia gentleman, a kind and generous friend and a devoted father. His wife preceded him in death, June 6th, 1894.

Among the descendants of the well-known Jacob Ege, Sr., are many of the first families of Richmond and vicinity to-day, and esteemed throughout the land.—From an Obituary, written soon after Mr. Ege's death, February 27th, 1903.

SKETCH.

John Brown Ege for a number of years was a resident of Petersburg, Virginia. During that time he was prominent in the community, holding an important position in the affairs of the city. He conducted a large Printing and Publishing business, and, as Editor and Publisher of the Rural Messenger, he wielded no small influence thereby for the general good, both civic and moral, in the community. The Editor of the Exponent, and a warm friend, spoke of him "as a good and noble man, with a warm and generous heart, and a friend to all with whom he came in daily contact, witnessing to his daily intercourse with friends, his urbanity to strangers, his jovial flow of soul in social converse and his goodness of heart to the poor and needy." His employees bore him the very tender tribute of their esteem for him as a man of generous impulses, high sense of honor and unselfish disposition. His fellow-citizens in sincerity felt that they could ill spare so good and true a man from their midst.

HISTORIC SKETCH.

Between the years 1742-1768 there landed in Philadelphia, from Germany via Rotterdam, quite a number of emigrants, of the apparently large family of Enders. Among these the name, Hans, Johannes (John), was most numerous. Among the younger ones (those under twenty-one years of age not being recorded) was a Nicholas and a Christian Philip Enders. The Nicholas family settled in York County and the latter in Lancaster County, Pennsylvania. Nicholas must have been quite young, born about 1740, when he came with older ones of his family to this country, as he married about 1769, Susannah Fahnestock, of an older family of the name, also of the Ephrata Settlement, in Lancaster County, of which family, also, a Borius Fahnestock married Elizabeth Enders, supposed to be a sister of Nicholas, or a cousin of the Christian Philip Enders family, of Lancaster County.

Nicholas and wife settled on a farm in Paradise Township, near the town of York, where they reared a family of nine children.

The Fahnestock family is a very old one in Germany, and also among the early German settlers in this country. Among them have been since making this country their home, professional men, successful merchants and bankers.

A prominent family of the name resided in Gettysburg previous to and after the Civil War for a time, and were the most prominent merchants there. There is also in New York quite an old well-established banking firm (Fahnestock & Co.), during the Civil War a branch of Jay Cooke, Drexel & Co.'s famous financial power and influence.

John Enders, the special subject of this sketch, was the oldest son of Nicholas and Susannah Fahnestock Enders. He was born July 16, 1776. He came to Richmond, Va., when quite a young man and engaged in the tobacco business. He began manufacturing in a small way. He was very successful and soon enlarged the business, shipping leaf tobacco and stems to Germany and other countries. The War of 1812 was a very severe blow, and the suspension of exports came near ruining him. After the war he rapidly recovered his fortune. By his natural tact and activity, foresight and honesty, he soon became the trusted Banker for the lower part of the City and County of Henrico, receiving money at interest and re-lending it liberally to his tobacco competitors and to those in other lines of business who were struggling to establish themselves. At one time he was the mainstay of twenty or twenty-five business concerns, and at 9 o'clock office hours of each morning he practically held a "levee" for these dependants, when the occasion was an interesting sight.

Mr. Enders corresponded in German, and this was a great aid in conducting his foreign business. The busy scene in his warehouses and on the docks which he owned indicated the wonderful energy and success of his constantly growing business. He was truly the pioneer in this now world-wide tobacco expansion in its trade. While superintending the erection of one of his numerous warehouses on the Richmond dock, a ladder broke under his weight and he was killed in 1852, in the midst of his useful life. Although seventy-five years old at the time, he was still vigorous and never more actively at work. As an active member of the Episcopal Church, he was the treasurer and the mainstay of Old St. John's Church Parish. He was probably the wealthiest man of his day in his city, if not in the State, and from his liberal dealing with his fellow-citizens, was beloved by all. He married, in 1814, Sarah Lambert Ege, daughter of Samuel and Elizabeth Walker Ege, and granddaughter of Jacob Ege, of the "Old Stone House," who survived him but four months and seven days. A monument marks their resting place in the Cemetery of Old St. John's Church.

SKETCH.

William Palmer spent his youth at "Granite Hill," his father's country house on the Frederick Turnpike, one and a-half miles from Ellicott's Mills, Maryland, now "Ellicott City." He was educated at "Rock Hill Academy" in the above-mentioned place. He first engaged in business in Baltimore with The Robert Sinclair Company. While still a youth, he came to Richmond and established an Agricultural and Implement Factory, and dealt in seeds and farmers' supplies.

Mr. Palmer married, 1833, Elizabeth Walker, oldest daughter of John Enders, Sr. He was an active and influential citizen, and prospered in all his business undertakings. He opened the books for subscription to the Richmond and Danville Railroad (now the Southern Railway), became a large stockholder and was for many years Vice-President and Acting President of the road. He was also a Director in the Mutual Assurance Society, and the Fire and Marine Insurance Co., both old and prosperous companies, the first being for one hundred and seventeen and the latter seventy-nine years in successful operation. He was also a Director in the Bank of the Commonwealth, but which did not survive the losses of the War, 1861-1865. Mr. Palmer died in 1870, leaving a large family.

NOTE.—The author in his boyhood was a pupil in the above-mentioned school.

SKETCH.

Col. William H. Palmer, a brief sketch of whose active and influential life is here recorded, was a grandson of John Enders, Sr., and Sarah Lambert Ege. He was born in Richmond, and all his life interests have been centered in his native city. He is a thoroughly representative citizen, and his influence has always been exerted for the best interests, both civil and moral, in and for the welfare of the community, during all the years of his active life, now rounded out to the ripened age of three-quarters of a century. He is still active in business, being largely identified in the Banking, Insurance and Railroad interests of his city. His large and respected family are mostly settled around him, in happy and genial accord.

In his young and vigorous years he obeyed the call of his native State, with numerous others of his family and kinship, to take up arms, and wear them through the various conflicts of the Civil War.

WAR RECORD.

He was commissioned as 1st Lieutenant of the 1st Virginia Infantry, May, 1861. He was soon promoted as Adjutant of 1st Virginia Infantry and Assistant Adjutant General of 1st Brigade, Gen. Longstreet's Division. May, 1862, was commissioned Major of 1st Virginia Infantry Regiment. He commanded the regiment at the Battle of Williamsburg, after Colonel Williams was disabled by wounds—in which battle Major Palmer was wounded by a musket ball in his right arm. Again, as Assistant Adjutant General of General Longstreet's Division, Gen. J. L. Kemper commanding, he participated in the 2nd Battle of Manassas and in the 1st Maryland Campaign. He commanded the 1st Virginia Infantry Regiment in the Battle of Sharpsburg, or Antietam, Maryland. Major Palmer was then assigned by the War Department as Assistant Adjutant General in Gen. A. P. Hill's Light Division, Jackson's Corps, October, 1862. Was present with General "Stonewall" Jackson in front of battle lines on the night of May 2nd, 1863, at Chancellorsville, when General Jackson was mortally wounded, his horse killed under him, and right shoulder dislocated.

Major Palmer was promoted Lieut. Colonel in Assistant Adjutant General's Department in February, 1864, and assigned as Chief of Staff to Lieut. General A. P. Hill's 3rd

Army Corps, Army of Northern Virginia, and remained with him until he was killed before Petersburg.

Colonel Palmer was then assigned by Gen. R. E. Lee's order to Lieutenant General Longstreet, and remained with him until the surrender at Appomattox Court House, 1865.

SKETCH.

Charles T. Palmer is a prosperous farmer in Nelson County, Virginia. He was a member of Co. 2, Cutshaw's Battery, Richmond Howitzers, and served in C. S. A. through the War, until Appomattox.

An historic sketch of Mary Draper Inglis, above mentioned, is worthy of record as an example of dauntless courage, heroic endurance, mid Indian captivity, escape, hardship and journeying back to safety, freedom and family as follows:

Mary Draper Inglis was the daughter of George and Eleanor Draper, who emigrated to America in 1731. When Mary was eight years of age her parents settled in the Valley of Virginia, where she grew to womanhood. Strong and vigorous, she could spring into the saddle on her horse from the ground unaided, and could leap a ditch or fence as readily as her brother. This early physical training made possible the terrible experience and journey a few years later, in which her life was constantly at stake, and her woman's strength was pitted against the most terrible odds.

At sixteen, with her mother and brother, she went with a pioneer band, led by Thomas Inglis and his three sons, William, Matthew and John, to Southwest, Virginia, where they formed the first settlement west of the Allegheny Mountains, then named "Draper's Meadows," where the town of Blacksburg now stands. Mary, having married one of the Inglis sons, was the first white bride west of the mountains. Thomas Inglis had been a wealthy merchant of London, trading in his own ships, but his property being confiscated for political reasons, he came to America to build a home in its wilderness.

Five years passed. Everyone in the new settlement was prosperous, and the Indians friendly, until suddenly on the 8th of August, 1755, the day before Braddock's defeat, a party of Shawanees from beyond the Ohio River, fell upon the settlement, burned their buildings and killed, wounded, or captured every soul present. Mrs. Mary Inglis, after seeing her mother tomahawked, was carried into captivity, beyond the Ohio, with her two small children, Thomas and George, and some other settlers. A month later they reached the Shawnee village, when the captives were divided and scattered. Her helpless children were torn from her, to her heart-breaking grief. Thomas being sent to Detroit and George farther into the West, and Mrs. Inglis to "Big Bone Lick," Boone County, Kentucky, to assist in making salt for the tribe. She was thus left alone among savages, hundreds of miles from other white settlements, with but one old German woman, who had been previously captured in Pennsylvania. To try to escape seemed to invite almost certain death, but she preferred this risk to the fate that awaited her, and the brave-hearted young wife determined to make the attempt. Her German companion agreed to go with her, which they risked at the first opportune moment, each with a blanket and a tomahawk. They aimed for the Ohio River, which they then made their line of direction, but often forced to leave it by many devious paths, obstructed by other rivers flowing into it, whose course they had to follow, until they could cross it, and then reverse their course, thus doubling the distance of their perilous and toilsome journey. They subsisted on grapes, nuts and berries, and often on the tender inner bark of roots of plants pulled up. Through wilderness, storm and cold, privation, suffering and exposure, this fearful and constantly dangerous journey was pursued. Mrs. Inglis was soon compelled to escape her German woman, who had become an encumbrance, and a threatened source of a new danger and death, in which fortune favored her by finding an abandoned canoe, which enabled her to put the river between them. Then, alone, she toiled on, under constantly increasing privations—her clothing torn and worn to shreds, her moccasins worn out, and her shelter from storm or by night under some shelving rock or hollow log. At last she found herself at "Anvil Rock," which she supposed to be about fifteen miles from her home. It rose precipitately for two hundred and eighty feet, its base in the water. It was now the latter part of November. Snow had fallen, and it was bitterly cold. She stepped into the icy stream, hoping to pass around its base, but the water was too deep. She could get nothing to eat and no shelter. Wet and cold she threw herself down upon a rock, and lay there more dead than alive until morning, when hope revived. Her limbs were so swollen she could hardly stand, as well as faint for want of food. But the thought of at last being so near home buoyed her up, and she essayed the task of scaling the cliff. It was the most desperate hour of her struggle. At sunset of that terrible day of hope and effort she passed the cliff and came to a cultivated field, which she recognized as that of a friend and neighbor, Adam Harmon, who was harvesting his corn. She swooned at his feet. Relief was at hand. A few days tender nursing in his cabin enabled her to reach home, where husband and brother gave her a joyous welcome, who had escaped the massacre, by being absent in a distant field, five months before. It was thirteen years before her son Thomas was located and restored to his parents. He had become a veritable Indian, and was with difficulty prevailed upon to leave his tribe. George died soon after being taken from his mother. Mrs. Inglis, after her return, had other thrilling experiences, but lived to the age of eighty-five in a little cabin near Radford, which her husband erected in 1756, just after her return from captivity. The cabin still stands, the oldest house west of the Alleghenies. In a cemetery nearby, beside her husband, sleeps Mary Inglis, whose courage, heroism and endurance entitled her to a high place among the world's brave women.

On September 29th, 1909, in Fairview Cemetery, at Radford, Montgomery County, Va., there was unveiled by Mary Draper Inglis, a great-great-granddaughter, a monument to the noble woman whose name she bears.

VIRGINIA BRANCH.

The Monument is twenty-three feet high, in commemoration of Mrs. Inglis, twenty-three years of age at the time of her remarkable experience. It was designed and built by Captain William Inglis, a descendant, and bears the following inscription:

"Mary Draper Inglis, born in Philadelphia in 1732, died at Inglis Ferry, Va., in 1815. The first white bride married west of the Allegheny Mountains. Captured by Indians in 1755, at Draper's Meadows, near Blacksburg, Va. Escaping from her captors, she made her way home in winter, alone, some eight hundred miles, through a trackless wilderness, subsisting on nuts and roots for forty days. No greater exhibition of heroism, courage and endurance is recorded in the Annals of frontier history. To commemorate her noble character and wonderful heroism, this Monument is erected by her descendants, of the stones from the chimney of the cabin in which she lived and died after return from captivity."—*Condensed Account from that of William E. SKETCH.

John Enders, Jr., was born in Richmond in 1821, and was educated in the schools of the city. When he became of age he was a Leaf Tobacco Dealer in the firm of Preston & Enders, and later a Banker—firm, Enders, Sutton & Co. The banking business was closed when the Civil War commenced. During the Civil War Mr. Enders was the President of the Ambulance Corps, an association of Richmond gentlemen for the care of the wounded. This Corps was on every battlefield of the Army of Northern Virginia, with supplies and comforts for the sick and wounded. They received transportation and notice of impending conflicts from the Confederate Secretary of War.

The Ambulance Corps varied in numbers from fifty to one hundred men, and was on continuous call for duty until the close of the War.

SKETCH.

General James Connor entered Confederate Army early in 1861 as Captain of Co. A., Washington Light Infantry, Hampton's Legion, July 21, 1861. At Manassas, was promoted to Major. In June, 1862, was made Colonel of the 22nd North Carolina Regiment; June 21, 1864, was commissioned Brigadier General and assigned to the command of McGowan's and Lane's Brigades; subsequently as Acting Major General he commanded a Division, consisting of the Brigades of McGowan, Lane and Bushrod Johnson.

He participated in the following engagements: Fort Sumter in 1861; 1st Manassas, Yorktown, Stony Point, West Point, Seven Pines, Mechanicsville, Chancellorsville, Riddle's Shop, Darby's Farm, Fissell's Mill, Petersburg, Jerusalem Plank Road, Raines' Station, Winchester, Port Republic, and Cedar Run.

General Connor was severely wounded in the leg at the battle of Mechanicsville, June 16, 1862; and was again wounded in the same leg at Cedar Run, Oct. 12, 1864, when amputation became necessary. This ended his active service in command on the field.

SKETCH.

William Walker Weymouth left his English home in early boyhood, running away to be a sailor boy. He was shipwrecked on the Virginia shore, near the mouth of the Chesapeake Bay. He reached the land; was befriended and given a home by John Lowry, who brought him up to manhood. The "call of the sea" was handed down to later generations, in which calling a grandson, bearing his name, gained celebrity, and while in command of a British vessel, sickened and died, and was buried in the sea.

SKETCH.

Captain William Walker Weymouth, 3rd, Commander of the British cruiser Smyrna, died, and was buried at sea. January 14th, 1897. Captain Weymouth was a Confederate Naval Officer, and served under Admiral Semmes on the famous privateer Alabama. He was on that vessel when she was sunk by the Kearsarge, commanded by Captain John A. Winslow. He managed to escape capture. Upon the close of the Civil War, he remained in England, where he married and became a British subject. He entered the Royal Navy, and gradually rose in the service until he was placed in command of the Smyrna.

of the Grand Lodge of Masons in Virginia for forty years. He was a Masonic writer of no little ability and esteem and a philanthropic citizen in the bettering of the community.

A marble slab, inscribed Right Worshipful John Dove, M. D., marks his resting place in old St. John's Church Cemetery. Besides this his Masonic lodge erected a fine monument to his memory in a specially inclosed plot in Hollywood Cemetery.

His wife, Ann Eliza, daughter of Samuel Ege, lies buried beside him in old St. John's, and on her tomb is this touching tribute to her memory:

"Her house was ordered well,
Her children taught the way of life,
Whom rising up in honor,
Called her blessed.
The poor, with earnest benedictions,
On her steps attend."

LITERARY AND LIFE SKETCH OF JAMES DABNEY McCABE.

Born in Richmond, Va., July 30, 1841. He was the son of Rev. Dr. James Dabney McCabe, a prominent clergyman of the Episcopal Church, who was twice elected Bishop in his Church, but declined to serve. His mother was Josephine Pearson Auguste, whose father was a Frenchman from Pointe au Pietre, Guadaloupe. Rev. Dr. John Collins McCabe, of the same Church, was his uncle, and the Rev. Charles Cardwell McCabe, of the Methodist Church, was also a relative. The subject of this sketch was educated at Virginia Military Institute at Lexington, but was compelled, because of failing health, to give up his studies before graduation. A little while after this, and before twenty years of age, he opened a school for boys at Vicksburg, Miss., which was very successful until the Civil War caused its close. Returning to his native city, he engaged in editorial and literary work for magazines and newspapers.

August 6th, 1863, Mr. McCabe married Mary Shepherd Copeland, granddaughter of Dr. John Dove, of Richmond, in Old St. John's Church, in which her family had been pewholders from its foundation.

Mr. McCabe's health, never strong, gave way under the stress and privations of the war and the strenuous blockade. Food supplies were scanty, clothing and medicines exhausted. In this sad extremity of suffering and need, in October, 1864, with wife and young baby, they ran the blockade, crossing the country to the Potomac River, and across this in an open rowboat into Maryland. Finally, after a seven-day trip of exposure, hardship and danger, they reached the home of his father in Baltimore. After the close of the war he sojourned for a time in Boston, New York, and Baltimore, and lastly in Germantown, Philadelphia. He devoted his entire time to his chosen vocation, in editing magazines and writing for various publications, books and travel, spending a part of almost every year in Europe.

He wrote a life of General Robert E. Lee, illustrated by maps drawn by his wife from the private war maps of the General himself, and loaned by him for the purpose. This book had a marvelous success, passing through several editions, and several hundred thousands being sold.

In 1874, having moved back to Baltimore, he met with the loss of his home by fire, including his fine library and all his valuable literary and business papers. He died in Philadelphia in 1882.

Mr. McCabe's prolific pen produced quite a catalogue of valuable works. Over two millions of his books have been sold. Among them may be specially noted the following:

"Lives of Generals Robert E. Lee and 'Stonewall' Jackson."

"Cross and Crown" (religious).

"Great Fortunes."

"Our Country and Its Resources."

"Lights and Shadows of New York."

"Lights and Shadows of Paris."

"By-Paths of the Holy Land."

"History of the World."

"Centennial History of the United States."

"History of the Centennial Exposition."

"Encyclopedia of Business and Social Forms."

"Life of General Garfield."

"History of the Franco-Prussian War."

NOTE.

(501--). Gabriel Galt, 1st, was a soldier in the War of the Revolution. His wife inherited a portion of her father's original lots in the new City of Richmond. By mutual agreement of the heirs, previous to division by deed, Gabriel Galt became possessor of the portion of said lots on which, by his gift or sale, was built the Mason's Hall in 1787, and said to be the first house built exclusively for Masonic meetings in America. This Hall remains practically unchanged from the day of its completion, one hundred and twenty-four years ago, and still in use by the Masonic Body.

Mr. Galt was an active Mason in the Lodge at that time, and previous to the above date, in 1780-'83, was Master of Williamsburg Lodge, No. 6.

In October, 1909, it was the privilege of the author to attend the 122nd Anniversary of Richmond-Randolph Lodge, and where it was also his pleasure when called on to make an address in this Ancient Hall.

Of the children of Gabriel and Elizabeth Ege Galt, Elizabeth and Maria Dorothea, only, were married, and left heirs.

highly esteemed and beloved in the community of the old Virginia City of Williamsburg and vicinity in which they dwelt, and left their benison of influence and good works. Miss Sallie Maria was the last survivor, and passed to her rest and reward in a ripe old age, mourned by the whole community and a large circle of relatives.

NOTE.

William Galt, the first, and Dr. John Minson, 1st, Galt, the sixth child of Samuel Galt, the first, were half brothers by different mothers. Their sons, respectively, Gabriel and Dr. Alexander Dickie Galt, were half first cousins. Dr. Alexander Dickie Galt and his wife, Maria Dorothea Galt, the daughter of Gabriel, bore this relationship—viz., half first cousins once removed.

Further references to this special family will appear on later pages.

The history of the Galt family of Eastern Virginia is one full of historic interest.

This family from early Colonial days has been so doubly connected and inter-related, even from their earliest marriages in this country, that it would be a loss to the History and Genealogy of these various relationships not to incorporate it in this immediate sequel to the Genealogy of the Virginia Ege-Galt branch.

LINE OF DESCENT.

John and William Galt, Covenanters, of Ayrshire, Scotland, after the Battle of "Bothwell Brig," in 1679, fled to America, a price having been put upon their heads, and thus outlawed, because they would not repudiate "The Covenant," nor acknowledge that the Battle of "Bothwell Brig" was rebellion.

They landed first in South Carolina with Lord Cardross. Later, one of these brothers, supposedly John, and a son or nephew, Samuel, settled in Eastern Virginia, near Hampton.

SKETCH.

Of the above remarkable family in so many influential callings of note, and in that of William Richard Galt, recorded immediately above, the United States navy claimed the devoted service of three of the sons, Robert Ware Galt, as a Chief Engineer; Rogers Harrison, lately deceased, with rank of Commodore, and William Wilson, as General Pay Director of the Atlantic Division of the U. S. navy. The medical profession also claimed another, John Minson Galt, while the youngest son, Rev. Alexander Galt, is the rector of the old Colonial Parish, "St. Margaret's," in Anne Arundel County, Md., near Annapolis.

William Richard Galt, their father, settled in Norfolk, Virginia, quite early in life. He was a most distinguished scholar, writer and educator; was skilled in many languages and Masonic lore. He wrote a "History of Masonry" of all countries when he was seventy years of age. He died in Norfolk in 1892.

SKETCH.

Dr. John Minson Galt, 1st, was born in Williamsburg, the ancient capital of Virginia. He was educated at William and Mary College and in medicine at Edinburg and Paris. He was attending physician and surgeon at the Williamsburg Asylum for the Insane for many years. He had charge of the sick and wounded soldiers at Yorktown during the Revolution; was a member of the Committee of Safety at Williamsburg in 1774; a vestryman of Bruton Church; treasurer of Williamsburg Masonic Lodge, No. 6, in 1772, '73 and '74. He was also chairman of the Board of Trustees of William and Mary College.

Besides these various positions of usefulness he was most prominent in his profession in that early day, as well as in every good word and work for the betterment of the community in which he lived and labored to the end of his active life.

Dr. John Minson Galt, 4th, his son, followed with great success his honored father. He was also educated at William and Mary College. He began his medical study and training under his father; finished and graduated at Jefferson College, Philadelphia. He devoted his entire professional life to the study and treatment of the insane, and became a very distinguished alienist. He succeeded his father, in 1841, as the chief physician to the asylum and continued his interest and work there until the U. S. army during the Civil War took possession of Williamsburg and the asylum in 1862.

The shock of this sudden deprivation of his life work and love, and the attendant circumstances, broke his heart and caused his immediate death in the forty-fourth year of his age.

Much could be said of his great influence in his community, of his great fame and skill as a physician, and especially of his great success in knowledge and gentle treatment of the insane. Dr. John Minson Galt, 4th, brother and sisters, were all unmarried, and all were remarkable for intellect, culture and influence in their community, and thus greatly esteemed and beloved.

The last survivor was Miss Sallie Maria Galt.

During her later years a visitor and a writer called on her at the old ancestral home and penned for some newspaper of that day the following quaint article, signing himself as "Carl von Williamsburg":

"There is in the possession of Miss Sallie Maria Galt an old family portrait representing four generations, viz., the great-grandmother, the grandmother, a mother, and son. The first is Mrs. Jacob Ege, Sr., who was Miss Maria Dorothea Scheerer, who crossed the ocean with her father from Hesse-Cassel, Germany; landed in Philadelphia in 1738; thence at once to Virginia, when our Dominion's "Proud City of the Seven Hills" was in its infancy. Her husband built the first house in the newly-planned city, known as the "Old Stone House." The second figure in the painting is her daughter, Mrs. Gabriel Galt; the third her grand-daughter, Mrs. Gabriel Galt Williamson, and the fourth her great-grandson, Frederick Williamson. The two old ladies wear high white caps, profusely decorated with frills, and pure white scarfs crossed upon the breasts. Mrs. Williamson is represented as a bright, merry-faced girl, dressed in a short-waisted frock, so fashionable in that day. The boy, a fine infant, greatly resembling the babies of the present day, holds in his hand a yellow bird. The picture is quaint, interesting and beautiful. The charming lady to whom this portraiture belongs lives surrounded with memories of the past, such as this, which present generations are so apt to neglect, as without value or interest.

"But of all her rich possessions in this line she prizes this portrait, as it keeps before her eyes the images of those whose blood flows in her veins."

This article, copied by the author from an almost obliterated clipping, by the aid of a glass, and being without date, must have ante-dated by some years the death of Miss Galt, 1880. It was also the good fortune of the author to visit recently, 1909, the ancient capital of Virginia, to enter this "Old Galt Home" of more than a century's age, still in possession of the Galt family, and to view the old portraits and the whole ancient setting and furniture, just as they have stood during the years that have flown. It was as if one had suddenly stepped out of this modern day and surroundings into the simplicity and beauty of colonial days long gone. T. P. E.

NOTE.

A very remarkable and most interesting fact in the history of this truly remarkable family is seen in the oft-repeated names, so beautifully perpetuated, thereby linking in Christian names and loving remembrance the different generations through so long a period, and with increased distinction as thus handed down—a rare example of family interest in these modern days, and worthy of imitation, in contrast to the many meaningless names so oft inflicted on the younger generations.

The name John Minson was that of an influential colonial settler of Eastern Virginia and a respected friend and neighbor of the early Galt settlers. Thus esteemed, his name has been perpetuated in no less than six generations, four of whom were highly honored physicians of note. The name "Dickie," appearing in five generations, is also worthy of note, as that probably of some family tie of which we have not found in this research.

The name Alexander was that of the father, whose daughter, Judith Craig, became the wife of John Minson Galt, the first, and so appears in seven generations, two of whom also were physicians, as well as his two sons.

The whole number of physicians in the family were fourteen. Few family lines from father to son, either of early or modern times, can boast of so many famous physicians and surgeons. The first asylum built exclusively for the care of the insane in this country was the one built in Williamsburg in 1773.

James Galt was the first superintendent of this asylum. During the War of the Revolution he was an officer in the army. When the war was over he resumed his position in the asylum. For eighty-nine years, with an interval of only eleven years short of a century, the physicians of this family consecutively were associated with the care of the asylum. They were the first and foremost in the adoption of the humane and gentle treatment of the insane in this country—a fact only paralleled by that of the famous Tukes family of England.

SKETCH.

Mrs. Caroline Randolph Lambert Harrison, widow of the late William Mortimer Harrison, who lived to the great age of ninety-three years, was the oldest daughter of General William Lambert, and a great-granddaughter of Jacob Ege, of the "Old Stone House." She was a woman of rare mental endowments and cultivation, gentle and considerate, added to great personal charm of manner and beauty, rarely seen at her age, all of which rendered her attractive to all who came in contact with her. She was noted for her charitable work, in addition to her great interest in the remarkable work of Ramabais Mission for the uplifting of India. She worked personally for it almost up to the time of her death, having collected and sent over $600 for that Mission.

During the latter portion of her life many troubles, sorrows and trials befell her, and, last of all, almost total blindness, all of which she bore with true Christian patience and resignation. She had filled so large a place for so many years in her community that her departure left a void, not soon, if ever, to be filled.

INTRODUCTORY SKETCH OF GEORGE-MICHAEL
EGE, SECOND SON OF THE FAMILY, LANDING IN PHILADELPHIA IN 1738, AND THE HEAD OF THE PENNSYLVANIA BRANCH.

- I 2. George-Michael Ege, though but twenty-three years of age on coming to this country, evidently had the military spirit, and had no doubt served a period of his young days as a soldier in his native land.

He answered this spirit and call in behalf of his newly-adopted country during the French and Indian Wars of 1756 and '57, and served as a soldier in the "First Independent Troop of Horse" of Philadelphia. Historically this was the parent organization of the now celebrated "First City Troop" of Philadelphia. He was then married and with a young family.

George-Michael Ege did not long survive this service. He died in January, 1759. And, as quoted from a note concerning his death, in the Records of St. Michael's Lutheran Church, Germantown—"after suffering great bodily and mental weakness, aged forty-five years."

He died at his home in Germantown, where according to his will he owned property, as well as in the "Northern Liberties"

Philadelphia. In said will, he left all his property to his wife during her life, and then to his two sons George and Michael in equal division.—Will Book L, page 214, Record Office, City Hall, Philadelphia.

The fact of the mention of only the two sons in the will indicates the early death of the other children, even where death dates are not noted, unless in the case of the oldest son Jacob, of whom there is a tradition, that he left home as a very young man before his father's death, and was lost sight of ever after.

His two sons—George and Michael, at his death were but eleven and six years of age, respectively.

In the previous year, 1758, their Aunt Elizabeth Hölz had become the wife of Baron Von Stiegel. The widow with her two boys was induced to make their home with them at Brickerville (now Elizabeth), Lancaster County.

NOTE.

A number of years ago there was published the death notice of a Jacob Ege, who had died in the South, leaving great wealth in mines, and advertising for heirs,—but none were found to claim the inheritance.

The boys were practically adopted by the Baron, then in his prosperous days. They were brought up by him, educated and taught the iron business.

The after history of this eventful time, both in the life of the baron and his Ege proteges, will fully follow in proper sequence.

NOTE.

In 1769, "A will of Mrs. Mary Matison, widow, and sister of Anna Catharine Hölz Ege, and Elizabeth Hölz Stiegel, mentions bequests both of property and money to her nephews George and Michael Ege."

It is of interest from the same will to note how early the Hölz family made use of the Anglicised name, Wood. "In this will was also mentioned the names of brothers, Andrew, George, and John Wood, (deceased). Also sisters, one, who married a Garrett, and one who married a Simon; a nephew, Michael Henry Wood; a niece, his sister, Mary Wood; a niece, Margaret Garrett, and a niece, Elizabeth Simon. Also children of her brother, Andrew Wood, viz., George, Andrew, Elizabeth, John and Hannah Wood. And as executors, her brothers, Andrew and George Wood."—Will Book O, page 341, Record Office, City Hall, Philadelphia.

The home of Anna Catharine, and Elizabeth Holz (Wood), and where they were married the one to George Michael Ege, the other to Baron Von Stegel.

PENNSYLVANIA BRANCH.

NOTE.

This first ancestress of the Pennsylvania branch of the Ege family in this country was buried in the quaint family burial lot, on the Boiling Springs Estate. The lot was enclosed by a stone wall, the entrance being through a solid iron doorway and iron door, which were made at the furnace of her son Michael.

The stone that marks her last resting place bears this inscription, viz :

“In memory of
Catharine Ege
Mother of
George and Michael Ege,
who departed this life,
November ye, 6th 1786,
in the 76th year of her Age.”

EPITAPH.

“Stop Passenger and weep !
But not for Me ;
Lament thy own Misery !
As I am now, so must thou be,
Therefore, prepare and follow Me.”

MEMORIAL SKETCH.

The quaint Old Burial Lot, at Boiling Springs, Pa., its stone walls, with iron frame and door, made at the ancestral furnace, one hundred and twenty-five years ago, had yielded to the ravages of time and vandal, rendering it a desolate ruin. The iron door, which had long suetered it from unhallowed intrusion, had been wrenched from its iron frame, and stolen. The tomb-stone of the early ancestress alone remained, but had long since fallen to the ground, and ceased to mark the spot of Mother Earth, where slumber the remains of this maternal head of the family name in this country, and was leaned against a crumbling wall,—other stones had gone to decay and some had been carried away.

From this picture of desolation, “the very stones seemed to cry out Reproach” for this sad spectacle of neglect. The old estate held for three generations, had passed from the last owner of the family name for fifty years, and so there seemed to be no one to heed that cry.

To one in the fourth generation from that early ancestress, who recently made a casual visit to view the ancestral homestead and its interesting surroundings, that “voice” from those crumbling walls made a special appeal.

SEQUEL.

The new, well proportioned and re-built walls, the old tombstone re-dressed, and with other tablets, securely built in the face of the wall, new iron gate, and iron tablet thereon, form the “Restored Memorial” and the answer to that voice.

HISTORIC SKETCH.

This sketch of the life and times of George Ege, which are so inseparably associated with his most active and successful career in iron industries, and in which he was a leading Iron Master of his day for many years, seems best here as it must necessarily claim a large part thereof.

Coming under the wise care and guardianship of his uncle, Baron Henry William Von Stiegel, at an early age, and by whose scholarly aid in his education George Ege imbibed the spirit of this important industry, by which he had been surrounded—when old enough he began the active preparation and experience for the business of his life, at Elizabeth Furnace, Brickerville, Lancaster County, and Charming Forge, Berks County, under his uncle.

In 1763, Baron Stiegel and Charles Stedman purchased Charming Forge, then first so named by Baron Stiegel because of its picturesque location.

It was situated on Tulpehocken Creek, built by John George Nikoll a hammersmith, and Michael Miller in 1749. It was then known as Tulpehocken "Eisen Hammer," Pennsylvania German for "forge."

In 1772, because of his new enterprise at Manheim, the Baron leased Charming Forge to George Ege and George Zantzinger.

The first venture, however, by George Ege on his own account, was the purchase in 1769, being then just of age, of Berkshire Furnace in Heidelberg Township, from the widow of William Bird, from whom the town of Birdsboro took its name.

In 1774, George Ege bought out the Stedman half interest in Charming Forge for eight hundred and thirty-eight pounds,—and nine months later bought the remaining half interest of the Baron for sixteen hundred and sixty-three pounds.

On a commanding elevation, overlooking the beautiful lake formed by the damming of the creek for the use of the works, he chose the site for the erection of a home for his bride, which he built in 1777. It was built of native blue limestone,—a large and substantial mansion, in Colonial style of architecture. It is still in fairly good condition, though untenanted when seen recently by the writer—lately vacated by the widow of George R. Taylor,—the last of the name in a family line, who in succession had been the superintendents and managers of the works, and had become the owners of Charming Forge after the death of George Ege.

An older Reading furnace on French Creek, and a Mary Ann Furnace in Berks County, which had been in existence from 1762, was also owned and operated by George Ege and George Ross.

GEORGE EGE MANSION
Robesonia Furnace, Berks County, Pa., built 1807.

PENNSYLVANIA BRANCH.

In 1793, George Ege built the new Reading furnace at Robesonia, the largest and finest of them all, and a near neighbor to the Berkshire furnace of his first ownership. This Reading-Robesonia furnace is situated about two miles east of Womelsdorf, which is about midway between it and Charming Forge.

Here he also built a new mansion in 1807, one of the finest Colonial buildings of its day. It still stands in perfect condition, in beautiful surroundings and is visited from far and near, admired for its fine proportions without, and woodwork of finest handicraft within. On the newel post of the handsome Colonial stair-case is a silver plate with the monogram G. E. E., George and Elizabeth Ege.

This was their home while they lived, and since has been the home of successive superintendents of the works.

On the site of the original furnace, a portion of the old wall still retained, stands the modern and most completely equipped furnace in this country—now known as the Robesonia, and with a capacity of two hundred and fifty tons of pig iron every twenty-four hours. It is operated by The Robesonia Iron Company, Limited.

In 1804, George Ege built Schuylkill forge, at Port Clinton, Schuylkill County. Joseph Old, grandson of Baron Stiegel, who had married Rebecca Ege, his daughter, lived at the forge and was its manager.

This completes the extensive chain of iron operations, of his remarkable activity and ability, before, through and after the war of the Revolution. Around these prominent operations he added large estates of land—at Charming Forge 4,000 acres; at Reading furnace 6,000 acres, and at Schuylkill furnace 6,000 acres, and four large farms in Tulpehocken and Heidelberg Townships of 1,000 acres. In 1824, about the time of his retiring from active business, the assessed value of his real and personal estate was $380,000.

Withal this, he was not indifferent to the calls of civic duty, nor for the interests of the community in which he lived. During the Revolution he was an ardent patriot, a friend and helper of General Washington. In 1783, he was a member of the General Assembly of the Commonwealth. In 1791, he was appointed one of the associate judges of Berks County, under the Constitution of 1790, and served continually with marked ability for twenty-eight years, until 1818, when he resigned the position to devote himself exclusively to his extensive business interests. He died at his home at the Reading furnace in 1829, aged 81 years and 9 months, and his remains were interred and now rest in the Lutheran Church Cemetery at Womelsdorf. The burial lot is substantially enclosed and kept in order, for which a perpetually endowed fund was provided. There rest also the kindred of the next two generations.

During these eventful years there were associated a group of men in various ways of friendship and business relations through their varied iron operations, viz: The Grubbs, Jacobs, Olds, Birds and Colemans, mention of whom deserves a place in this history.

Peter Grubb, Sr., was the discoverer of the immense and valuable iron ore hills at Cornwall, Lebanon County, which have been mined continuously for nearly two hundred years. He is said to have built a bloomery, or forge, near these mines as early as 1735, and the first furnace on the Cornwall site in 1742. In 1785, Robert Coleman, Sr., bought from his sons, Curtis and Peter Grubb, Jr., one-sixth of Cornwall furnace and mines,—These two sons were colonels in the War of the Revolution. Later Robt. Coleman, Sr., secured four additional sixths, and George Ege, the remaining sixth, for the use of his new Reading furnace, and which in the final disposition of his estate he assigned "in perpetuo," to the use and interest of the said furnace, for as much ore as one furnace on this site could use. This provision has continued to this day, 1910, through all the changes and enlargements that have taken place, but still one furnace, and now operated by the Robesonia Iron Company, Limited. The real estate being owned by Coleman descendants.

James Old, born in Wales in 1730, came to this country about 1750, and soon secured employment as a forgerman at the Windsor furnaces. Being shrewd and energetic he prospered, and in 1765 built Pool forge, on a branch of Conestoga Creek, near the Windsor furnaces. He married Margareta, daughter of Gabriel Davies, of Lancaster County.

Robert Coleman, Sr., was born Nov. 4, 1748, near Castle-Fin, Donegal County, Ireland. He came to this country at 16 years of age, and found employment with James Old in his furnaces. In 1773, he married Ann Old, the daughter.

In 1775, Robert Coleman, Sr., became the owner of Elizabeth furnace at Brickerville, built by Baron Stiegel in 1757, on the site of another built by Jacob Huber in 1750, whose daughter Elizabeth was the Baron's first wife, and for whom he named the furnace. This furnace which was large and successful from its beginning continued in operation for one hundred years, ceasing in 1857. The stone mansion built there by the Baron for his residence still stands in good preservation, and is owned by G. Dawson Coleman.

PENNSYLVANIA BRANCH.

Robert Coleman, Sr., died in Lancaster, Pa., and is buried there.

Cyrus Jacobs, of Welsh parentage, born 1761, was also in the employ of James Old, and married his daughter Margaretta. He also became an iron master, owner and operator. He died at White Hall, Pa., in 1830.

William Old, son of James, married Elizabeth Stiegel, daughter of the Baron and Elizabeth Huber. Their son Joseph Old, married Rebecca Ege, only daughter of George Ege, and was the manager of Schuylkill forge.

As a fitting end to this historic sketch, the writer, in his researches found an interesting letter, of which the following is the copy.

From this communication, addressed by George Washington to General Wayne, it appears he was in Heidelberg Township in the Fall of 1777. He was entertained at the home of George Ege.

Sept. 17, 1777.

Reading Furnace, 6 o'clock P. M.

Dear Sir. I have this instant received yours of half past 3 o'clock A. M. Having written to you already to move forward upon the enemy, I have but little to add. Generals Maxwell and Porter are ordered to do the same, being at Pott's Forge. I could wish you and those generals to act in conjunction, to make your advance more formidable, but I would not too much time delayed on this account. I shall follow as speedily as possible with jaded men—Some may probably go off immediately if I find they are in condition for it. The horses are all most all out upon patrol. Cartridges have been ordered for you. Give me the earliest information of everything interesting, and of your moves, that I may govern mine by them.

The cutting off the enemy's baggage would be a great matter.

Yours sincerely,

GEN. A. WAYNE.

GEO. WASHINGTON.

NOTE.

George Ege personally interceded with General Washington in behalf of the Hessian prisoners, who were confined in a stockade on the mountain side near Reading, where they were suffering from the exposure and cold of winter. Accordingly a large number of them were paroled, and given employment both by Baron Stiegel and George Ege, in mining ore and in the forests cutting wood and burning charcoal for furnace use. Many, if not most of these Hessians, never returned to their country, but settled in Berks and adjoining counties.

MICHAEL EGE, SR., MANSION
Boiling Springs, Pa.
Built 1795.

BUILDING REMODELED 1865.

HISTORIC SKETCH OF MICHAEL EGE, 2ND, AND HIS IRON OPERATIONS.

Michael Ege, 2nd, son of George-Michael and Anna Catarina Hölz Ege, and brother of George, 1st, was born in Philadelphia in 1753.

From the boy of six years of age, after the death of his father, he was brought up to young manhood at the home of his uncle, Baron Von Stiegel, under the same surroundings, care and tutelage as that of his brother.

From some incidental circumstances, we are able to account for his being in a locality, part of York County, Pa., and so near the portion of Cumberland County, where was to be the scene and activity of his life work, and also that he married there. Because of the intimate business relations of his uncle, and brother George, with Robert Coleman, Sr., Michael was induced to take employment at Spring Forge, which was owned and operated by a manager for Robt. Coleman, Sr. This forge was situated about midway between the towns of York and Hanover, York County. This forge remained in the Coleman family and was operated until about the beginning of the Civil War. It is now known as Spring Grove, and a large paper mill occupies the site of the forge—distant about twenty-five miles from Boiling Springs.

There, when but four months older than nineteen, June 26, 1772, he married Ann Dorothea Wolff, daughter of Peter Wolff, a German farmer of wealth and large land holdings. Soon after his marriage we find him at work at Boiling Springs, Cumberland County, the seat of the Carlisle Iron Works—then a young and vigorous new industry.

A history of this from small beginnings is full of interest, and includes the procuring of the various tracts of land forming the large estate.

An early forge, built probably between 1750 and 1760, had evidently been located there, but by whom built and operated is not known but by tradition, and probably on land without grant or authority,—which was not a rare occurrence in those early days.

Early iron industries and settlements at and near Mt. Holly gap were occasioned by reason of the fine water advantages and large deposits of iron ore in the vicinity. According to tradition, a forge was built here as early as 1748, and probably a small furnace and the making of iron for some years.

These early works were frequently re-modeled and rebuilt according to well known tradition.

The accounts of early ownership are very conflicting both as to names and dates—one account states that the first patents granted by the Proprietaries, were taken by Charles McClure before the Revolution. Again, in Record Book K, Vol. I, p. 136—there is an account of an agreement made Dec. 8th, 1875, between Stephen Foulke and William Cox, Jr., to a partnership in a tract of land in Middleton Township, of 563 acres, for building a furnace and saw mill. It is known that this firm built a furnace in this year and operated it for some years. June 1st in 1803, it was sold by Sheriff Grason, as the property of Kettera, Jago, and Boyd for a debt of six thousand dollars, due Samuel Blackburn and Thomas Foster, executors of Stephen Foulke, deceased. At which sale it was bought by Michael Ege, Sr.

Between these first and last dates, the following are of record: In a deed dated June 21st, 1780, (Bk. F, vol. I, p. 74) Dorcas Boyd, widow, Wm. Thompson, and Joseph Spear, Executors of John Boyd, deceased, conveyed to Stephen Foulke, of Huntingdon Township, York County, all that saw mill and lands thereto belonging, situate in Middleton Township, containing 1264 1-2 acres, part of the estate of Thos. Cookson, granted him by warrant and patent in 1762. Note.—(This was evidently a part of his grant, which was situated in the Township named by him as Cook Township, and later a part of the Pine Grove estate). Again, Stephen Foulke, by deed dated June 14, 1795, (Bk. L, Vol. I, p. 357), conveyed all that furnace, forge, grist and saw mill, with said timber land thereunto belonging, containing 1264 1-2 acres in one survey in pursuance of several warrants granted Thomas Cookson, to John W. Kettera, Samuel Jago, and James Boyd. Again in an agreement made December 24, 1799, John W. Kettera sold to John Walker and Archibald Loudon "Holly Iron Works." A large interest still remained in the name of Foulke, when sold in 1803 to Michael Ege, Sr. Not far from this early forge were three ore banks which evidently had been mined at this early period, and very likely for other forges in the vicinity, of which there was one a few miles east, equally unknown but on the same site, one operated by a J. W. Boyer in the latter part of last century. And another of the same character said to be as early as 1748, at the Holly Gap.

The old forge at Boiling Springs, and the three ore banks, were no doubt the attraction that led to the formation of the John S. Rigby Company in 1761, and to secure legal title to these, with the following result.

The three ore banks were described as having 20 acres each, and were embraced in an original grant of a large body of land made by William Penn to Adam Broosen, then of Holland, deed dated 7th of March, 1682, the same year of Penn's coming to take possession of his royal grant of Pennsylvania.

PENNSYLVANIA BRANCH.

The Broosen grant for some reason reverted to the Proprietaries, and was vested in Richard Peters, secretary of their land office in Philadelphia, empowered to issue warrants and grant titles.

Richard Peters, by deed of April 14th, 1761, conveyed in fee one thousand acres of said land, but on the 16th of same month, caused to be surveyed to him in part of the 1,000 acres the three ore banks, of 20 acres each. Jacob Yoner and Christina his wife, by their deed, dated Nov. 1761, conveyed the same to John S. Rigby and Nathaniel Giles. This was the nucleus of the firm, soon formed by Rigby and Giles, conveying their holdings to the new Rigby & Company, composed of John S. Rigby, Samuel, John and Joseph Morris. On the 11th of February, 1762, Nathaniel Giles conveyed his one-fourth interest to Francis Sanderson, he thus becoming a member of the firm.

A tract in Middleton Township, (now South Middleton) containing 1644 acres, for which a warrant was obtained from Richard Peters in pursuance of five of eight certain warrants, dated May 31st, 1762, and surveyed in the name of John S. Rigby & Company on the 8th, 9th, 10th and 12th days of July, 1762, and confirmed to them. The 1644 acres, it would seem, included the 1,000 acres, the ore banks, with their original 20 acre assignment, and lands adjacent. In addition to this there was another important tract needed to complete the requirements of the furnaces and buildings. This tract is described as containing 398 acres and 132 perches, known as the Boiling Springs property, adjoining the previously mentioned tract of 1644 acres; was granted by patent from the Proprietaries Oct. 13th, 1762, (Patent Book AA, vol. III, p. 445 &c). Portions of this tract had been deeded to John Dickey and David Reed, which had to be acquired from them before the entire tract could be confirmed to Rigby & Co. The first portion of this was a tract of 29 acres, 126 perches, for the site of the furnace, which was begun in 1762 and which no doubt was the site of the old traditional forge.

This entire estate was divided into 16 equal shares, held as follows: John Rigby 4-16, Francis Sanderson 4-16, Samuel Morris 3-16, Joseph Morris 3-16 and John Morris, Jr., 2-16. All of this property was conveyed in fee simple by Richard Peters to the John S. Rigby Company, October 14th, 1762.

John S. Rigby and wife, Henrietta, by deed dated July 24th, 1764, conveyed in fee 2-16 of their holdings to John Armstrong. About the same time or a little later, they conveyed their remaining 2-16, to Robert Thornberg, thus Armstrong and Thornberg becoming members of the Company. Thornberg being a skillful operator managed the works in the interests of the rest of the Company, and continued to do so until shortly before his death.

On the 7th of June, 1765, Francis Sanderson and wife, by deed, conveyed in fee, his 1-4 interest to Amos Strottle, of Philadelphia, who by will devised it to his daughters, one of whom, Ann, married Cadwalader Morris.

The entire Morris holdings were consolidated by their owners, and by heirs of some of the brothers, and conveyed to Michael Ege, Sr., April 7th, 1786. Previous to this Robert Thornberg had died, 1774. His sons Thomas and Joseph were his executors. Henrietta Rigby brought suit against them for unpaid claims, and secured judgment against them, under which Sheriff Postlethwait sold the 2-16 Thornburg holdings to Michael Ege, Sr., in 1775. Deed for this transaction however does not appear of record until 1785.

After Robert Thornberg's death Michael Ege, Sr., operated the works, but it was generally thought that he held large ownership, some years before this, but the fact is, that his first real ownership begun in 1775, and then he was but 22 years of age. And this bears out the tradition in the family, that he did so about the time of his coming of legal age. So it is hardly likely that there is any real discrepancy between the two dates as above mentioned. His complete ownership of the Boiling Springs Iron Works, and original estate of the Rigby Company, did not take place until the 13th of June, 1792, when John Armstrong and wife conveyed their 2-16 holding, from 1764, until this date.

To this original estate, Michael Ege, Sr., during his lifetime added several thousand acres more, notably two farms, one by deed dated Dec. 13th, 1785, from Peter Wolff, his father-in-law, for 402 acres and 12 perches. Another from Adam Wolff, Oct. 21st, 1794, containing 429 acres, 64 perches—probably his brother-in-law.

In 1795, Michael Ege, Sr., built his mansion, beautiful for situation, on an elevated and rounded slope, with graduated terraces leading down to the Boiling Springs lake and stream. The mansion still remains unimpaired by a century of time. The woodwork of the commodious interior is largely of mahogany and other hard woods of skillful handicraft. A wide hall runs through the center, in which rises a handsome Colonial staircase with mahogany wainscot and balusters. Large fire places incased in iron, mantles of fine woodwork extending to the ceiling and cornice above the mantle shelf are a joy to behold, around whose hearth-stone three generations of the family name had been born, reared and dwelt. The whole environment is one of park and lake, and farm and original furnace and forge sites, with their picturesque ruins, still most attractive; and now with modern equipped park, and trolley line access from Carlisle, during the summer, it is visited by hundreds of admiring people.

The mansion is now owned and occupied by Mr. J. C. Bucher, including the entire surroundings of historic and romantic beauty, as above described.

But the enterprise and activity of Michael Ege did not rest satisfied with this. He had brought up three sons in this iron interest, for whom a sphere of active employ should be provided. In 1803, the Holly Iron Works of Foulke and Cox were sold at Sheriff's sale, and purchased by Michael Ege, Sr., over which he placed his second son George, as manager.

The history of this locality and early development is also involved in the uncertainty of its beginnings. It is located but a few miles west of the homestead property, along the mountain range of the Blue Ridge, south side of the Cumberland Valley and County. A narrow, wild and picturesque gap, with a rapidly flowing mountain stream passing through this range at this point.

It was originally called Trents Gap, but later named Holly, from a large tree of the name—rare in this latitude, which stood near the furnace site some distance up the stream, where the gap widened out. The locality has long been known as Mt. Holly Springs, and for many years was a place of summer resort. Some historic incidents connected with the Mt. Holly operations are of great interest and worthy of mention. "Wing's History" has the following: "Tradition says that there was a furnace at Upper Holly before the furnace built by Foulke and Cox. It also says on good authority that prior to the erection of Holly furnace, a forge for the manufacturing of cannon occupied the furnace site, and a mill connected with the forge for the purpose of boring the cannon stood where the present toll house now stands on the Carlisle and Hanover turnpike." Also that "the oldest cannon at present in the United States was manufactured here."

These cannon were made by William Dunning, a skillful iron worker, during the war of the Revolution. He manufactured successfully two, of wrought iron. He attempted a third, and a larger one, but on account of the great heat required and want of endurance by the workmen it was not finished. One of these was captured at the battle of Brandywine, and is said to be preserved in the Tower of London as a curiosity. The second was said to have been kept as a relic in the Carlisle Barracks.

William Dunning, after the Revolution, resided and died at Newville, Pa. Recently a fine memorial stone has been erected over his grave in the cemetery of the Presbyterian Church there. It is of granite and surmounted with a typical cannon cut in the same stone.

It is also said that the Hessian prisoners confined in Carlisle were sent out to Holly and cut and sawed the timber there to build the barracks for their shelter. The Carlisle Barracks, before the Civil War, for many years were used as a cavalry school for United States troops. The famous Indian school is now located in this historic seat.

The Holly furnace bought in 1803, contained also at that time, or soon after by additional purchase, 7,689 acres of mountain and ore lands which extended above the Hunter's Run Junction.

George Ege, second son of Michael, Sr., became the manager for his father, and continued so until 1815. After his father's death, George Ege became the owner by court partition. The Holly estate was estimated at that time at $60,190, besides which, the Orphans' Court awarded him $5,552 for his services, rendered as manager of the works for twelve years. In 1812 he built a new and larger furnace near the site of the former. He continued to operate these works and lands until Aug. 20th, 1838, when they were sold to the Farmers and Mechanics Bank, of Carlisle, for $28,600. After which time, for some years longer, Joseph Arthur Ege, son of Peter Ege, and grandson of Michael, Sr., was the manager.

The furnace was finally abandoned and torn down in 1855, to give place to the large paper industry, which is still in successful operation.

An interesting chapter in this Mt. Holly history is the following: Michael Ege, Sr., on June 2nd, 1815, conveyed by deed of trust to John Miller, seven tracts of this mountain and ore land amounting to about twelve hundred acres, in behalf of Elizabeth Miller Ege, wife of his son George, for the purpose of promoting her interest separate and apart from that of her husband. This deed of trust was witnessed by George D. Foulke and George Patterson (receipt for $10.00 consideration money being given). Said deed was acknowledged on the same date before George Patterson, "Justice of the Peace."

By some strange chance or reason, this deed was not revealed or made known until a short time before or after Mrs. George Ege's death, June 7th, 1848, when it was put on record by her husband in the Recorder's office of the County Court at Carlisle.

There it remained equally unknown until 1874, when it was discovered by chance by Judge Hepburn, who at once informed the living heirs, and for them brought an action for ejectment.

PENNSYLVANIA BRANCH.

This property had been encroached upon by various parties, at different times, and large quantities of valuable ores mined and shipped.

The suit was argued Oct. 12, 1874, before Judge B. F. Junkin, of Perry County. The suit was in favor of the heirs. It was carried up to the Supreme Court of the State. The decision of the lower court was affirmed, May 4th, 1875, and recovery was gained by the heirs, the saving clause being that no one party had held it for twenty-one years. And no intermediate deeds of change in owners of furnace and other lands had ever included these seven tracts. This to-day is the only remnant of a very great estate remaining in the family name. Note.—The writer saw in Gettysburg a Franklin stove with the name “George Ege, Mt. Holly Furnace.”

The next extensive iron interest that engaged the active enterprise of Michael Ege, Sr., was that of the Pine Grove Iron Works and estate.

The history of this property and iron development is of equal interest and importance with the others named and described. It is situated entirely within and of the ranges and valleys of South Mountain lying partly in the two counties of Adams and Cumberland, about ten miles south of Mt. Holly, approach to which was through the Holly Gap, and course of the mountain creek. The entire land holding of Michael Ege during his life of this estate amounted to 27,000 acres mountain, farm and ore lands. The first mention of Proprietary grants, of Richard and Thomas Penn, by warrant dated July 22, 1762, for a certain tract of land of 450 acres, on Mountain Creek in West Pennsboro Township, to Thomas Pope, who by deed, dated Oct. 22, 1764, conveyed the same to George Stevenson, in which deed it recited, as the same as was surveyed by William Lyon on which Finley McGrew hath lately erected a saw mill. April 21, 1772, George Stevenson conveyed it to Finley McGrew, who in turn conveyed the same April 15, 1773, to Jacob Simon.

These various conveyances are of record in Deed Books F, vol. I, p. 299; Book H, vol. I, p. 602.

These are the earliest recorded ownerships. But it is evident, that Robert Thornburg and John Arthur, experienced iron operators were interested here and probably during George Stevenson's several active years here. Robert Thornburg and John Arthur built the Pine Grove furnace in 1770. An early forge was built in the vicinity, before any legal grant of land, thought to be on the site of the later forges built and rebuilt there and known as Laurel Forge, some distance below the furnace site on the Mountain Creek.

EGE GENEALOGY.

On a tax list, in 1667, in Carlisle, Robert Thornburg is named as the owner of a forge to which was attached 1,200 acres of land. There is little doubt, if any, as to this being the locality. A ten plate stove is known, with name of "Pine Grove Furnace, 1770."

NOTE.

George Stevenson was a man of note, born in Dublin, 1718, educated at Trinity College, emigrated to America 1750. By Commission of Proprietaries, was Judge of York and Cumberland counties in 1755, and later in 1769 as a leading lawyer, he settled in Carlisle. He became a large land owner and manufacturer of iron, and held interests in several operations in different places. Associated with William Thompson, a general afterward in the Revolution, and George Ross, later a signer of the Declaration of Independence, they built the Mary Ann furnace in Long Swamp Township, Berks County, in which George Ege, brother of Michael, Sr., in 1769, became a partner with George Ross. Stevenson married Mary Cookson, daughter of Thomas Cookson, deputy surveyor for the Proprietaries, who surveyed and laid out the plan for Carlisle, for whom also Cook Township was named, and in which he had taken up land, and where also Stevenson is thought to have had Proprietary grants.

December 3, 1782, Jacob Simon conveyed Pine Grove Furnace and land, together with another tract of 100 acres, to Michael Ege, Sr., Thomas and Joseph Thornburg, sons of Robert Thornburg—Michael Ege one-half and the Thornburg brothers one-fourth each. They operated the furnace as tenants in common. Joseph Thornburg, by deed dated Dec. 2, 1788, conveyed his one-fourth part to Thomas Thornburg and John Arthur, who no doubt was still in interest in the operation of the furnace. Deed Book H, vol. I, p. 602. Thornburg and Arthur by deed dated Dec. 29, 1803 (Deed Book YY, vol. I, p. 416) conveyed the same to Michael Ege, who then became sole owner. Peter Ege, oldest son of Michael, in the meantime was superintending his father's interests from the time of his first purchase. Peter Ege married the daughter of John Arthur, and continued in the management until his father's death. As it is said Thornburg and Arthur built the furnace in 1770, in the interest of George Stevenson who was then the owner, it is most likely they built the fine old mansion still remaining.

Michael Ege at once began to make large improvements. He built a new Laurel forge on the old site, and added many tracts of land to the original, until it reached the large proportion of the estate at his death in 1815. After which it was confirmed, by court proceedings in partition to Peter Ege, who continued to operate it until 1835, when he, March 24, 1835 (Book QQ, vol. I, p. 91) conveyed to his sons Joseph Arthur and Michael Peter the personal property of Pine Grove and Laurel forge for the consideration of $20,000. They operated it Aug. 20, 1838, when it was levied on, and sold to Hon. Frederick Watts and C. B. Penrose, (Book Q, vol. 2, p. 189). November 25, 1843, Penrose and wife conveyed their interest to Hon. Frederick Watts, who conveyed the same February 5, 1845 to Edward and William M. Watts. Edward conveyed his interest to William M. Watts, who operated the furnace, forge and farms very successfully until 1864, when April 1st, Wm. M. Watts conveyed the same to William G. Moorehead (Deed Book P, vol. 2, p. 212) who conveyed the same by deed to the Company thus and then formed, viz: "The South Mountain Mining and Iron Company." This firm built a new furnace, rebuilt Laurel forge, and continued to make iron until about 1890, when the business in iron fell so low that many furnaces were compelled to close. The principal members of this Company were Jay Cooke, the financier of war fame, and Jackson C. Fuller, his life-long friend. A short time before the panic of 1873, the Company built a railroad from a junction with the Cumberland Valley at Carlisle to the Pine Grove Furnace, and this with their improved facilities for making iron, they sold to the Thomas Iron Company, of Catasauqua, for $1,000,000. After their first payments, they defaulted on the interest of their mortgage indebtedness, and the property reverted to the South Mountain Company. Mr. Watts still held a mortgage on his original sale, of $100,000, which had to be redeemed before the Company could regain clear title. This being done, they resumed business, extended the railroad from a junction at Hunters Run to Gettysburg, laid out a very beautiful excursion park near the furnace in a grove of magnificent trees, which for many years was well patronized. A little later Messrs Fuller & Cooke established a brick plant, which became quite a success. The furnace and forge have ceased their industry after a century. Messrs Fuller and Cooke, have departed this life, and their heirs hold the many landed acres.

Pursuing a little farther the iron history of the family name, it is necessary to add one other operation. Along the base of the same South Mountain, within the Cumberland Valley, extending for several miles of beautiful farm land, and bordered by the Yellow Breeches Creek, to what is now the village of Huntsdale, Michael Ege, Sr., built in 1794, the Cumberland furnace. This furnace in its first years was managed by his oldest son Peter, and later for some years by Joseph Arthur Ege, his son. This property of furnace, mill and fine farms became the inheritance of Michael's two daughters, Mary, who married Dr. Wm. C. Chambers, and Eliza, who married James Wilson. In a few years this valuable property, because of some defect in the record of early deeds, or failure to do so, by those entrusted, and unknown to their father, passed out of their hands, and which, a costly litigation by their heirs a few years later, failed to regain.

CONCLUSION.

This vast estate, at the time of Michael Ege, Sr.'s, decease, embraced eighty-seven, original, separate, and distinct tracts, in continuous line along said mountain for twelve miles, containing upwards of 50,000 acres, four furnaces, mills and farms. It all passed out of the family possession in the next generation, except the Boiling Springs estate, which was held until the latter part of 1859 by Peter F. his grandson, another generation having been born and brought up in the old homestead.

On June 3rd, 1815, Michael Ege, Sr., met his three sons, Peter, George, and Michael, Jr., for the purpose of deeding to them their portions, in lieu of a will. Peter and George refused to accept, as involving too large payments in order to equalize the share of each, which was to be the value of $100,000 each. Michael, Jr., accepted his, and received a deed therefor on the same day and date as follows: Carlisle Iron Works at Boiling Springs, including tracts of land pertaining thereto amounting to over seven thousand acres, with the homestead, and all houses, buildings, stock, cattle, furniture, waters, water courses pertaining to the same valued at $148,020, out of which Michael, Jr., was to pay $48,020 in certain proportions to other heirs.

Michael, Sr., died August 31st, 1815. Letters of administration were taken out by George Ege and others, September 18th, 1815. The courts in November, 1815, rendered their decision as to the two brothers and the two sisters, the daughters receiving, as their father had desired.

Michael Ege, Sr., was but sixty-two years of age, and from his full possession at about thirty years of age, in about the same number of years more, had amassed what for that day was a very large fortune.

SKETCH.

Major McFarlane, long a pioneer resident of Minneapolis, was a native of Newville, Cumberland Co., Pa., where he spent his early life, which was both active and useful, and where as a young surveyor he assisted in laying out a large addition to the town. He received his title of major from holding that rank in the "Ringold Artillery" of his county, which was organized by him, as a part of the State Militia force.

In 1855, he took a trip to the west for the purpose of selecting a location for a home in its new and rapidly increasing interest. He soon followed with his young family to grow up in and with the development of the new country. He made choice of Minneapolis and settled in the west end, in whose development he had a large share.

Endowed with the ambition of young manhood he immediately sought investment for the means he brought from Pennsylvania. In the fall of 1857, he erected a warehouse at the lower levee, south of the Washington Bridge, and in the next year, embarked in the forwarding and commission business, associating with him for a beginning James Sully and Capt. Reno, under the firm name of Sully, Reno & McFarlane. But in 1859, he assumed the entire control, and carried on the business for many years. He later entered into real estate and insurance in the firm of McFarlane, Burd & Co.

Notwithstanding his private business interests, he took a deep interest in public affairs. In 1864, and '65, he was a trustee of the School District No. 89, comprising practically all the territory now known as the West End. He was County Commissioner from 1871 to 1877, acting as Chairman of the Board most of the time. In 1877, he was elected City Alderman, in what was then known as the Sixth Ward. Strongly Republican, he had the distinction of serving as a Democrat.

As a member of the Park Commission, in the acquiring the lands for the city parks, Loring, Riverside and Elliott, is seen the monuments of his good judgment and wise choice. For a number of years, also, he served on the commission for opening and laying out streets and assessing benefits.

He was one of the founders of the Westminster Presbyterian Church, and a trustee of the same for many years. He was an old and honored member of the Odd Fellows and Masonic bodies, entering into fellowship with both these bodies in his native county in Pennsylvania. He transferred his memberships to his new home, and was thoroughly identified, and actively so, especially in the different orders of Masonry. He served as treasurer in them, for twenty-five years. He was a charter member of Zion Commandery of Knights Templar in 1863, and later, in 1892, charter member of Minneapolis Mounted Commandery. He was elected grand treasurer of Grand Commandery of Knights Templar of the State, in 1877, and continued in office until his death.

Major McFarlane was naturally of a frail constitution, but by judicious, careful and abstemious habits, in his diet and exercise, he avoided serious sickness during his more than three score years and ten of life. As a neighbor, friend and citizen, the West End, in his death, has lost one whose place will not easily be filled. Because of his advanced age, he could not actively participate in the progress of his adopted city, yet he always manifested a keen and devout interest in every detail of the city's welfare, quite as much as when he had taken active part in the building of this important western metropolis.

A beautiful trait of the Major's personal character is evidenced, in the fact, that, in his long and active life, Mr. McFarlane, by his careful thoughtfulness, and true generosity towards all with whom he came in contact in business or otherwise, gained a most enviable reputation for honesty and integrity, nor was he ever heard by his most intimate associates to utter an unkind word toward any one. In his language he was a stranger to vulgarity, always finding an appropriate word and chaste, to express either approval or disapproval. He was married to Margaretta Woodburn Ege, October 19, 1852. On October 19th, 1902, while still in good health, the couple celebrated their golden wedding, receiving the congratulations of hundreds of old and young friends. He died in 1904.

SKETCH.

General Peter Ege, grandson of Peter Ege, of Pine Grove Furnace, Pa., the subject of this sketch, was born at the home of his grandfather, November 10th, 1835, where he spent his young boyhood.

While attending school in New Bloomfield, Pa., the writer of this brief sketch met his cousin there in their boyhood for the first time. Less than a month difference in their ages, and family likeness so strong they could easily have been taken for brothers. Time soon separated them, the one southward, and the other to the west.

The changing circumstances of life, carved each one's career, until in lapse of years, the interest of, and preparation for, the history of the family name, brought the cousins in contact again by most interesting correspondence in their mutual years. The one became an educator and a clergyman—the other, a soldier, a lawyer, a business man, and a bank officer, and now each have retired from active professional life to well earned rest.

General Peter married, in 1861, Miss Harriet L. Booth, of Logansport, Indiana, granddaughter of Major William Booth, of Virginia, War of 1812, whose wife was Deborah Hart, daughter of Edward, son of John Hart, of New Jersey, a signer of the Declaration of Independence.

General Peter enlisted for the Civil War as Colonel of the 34th Regiment, Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and served until the close of the war. He participated in battles at Shiloh, Corinth, Stone River, Kennesaw and Lookout Mountains.

He was the first wounded at Green River, Kentucky, in 1861, again wounded at Rome, Georgia, in 1864, and again at Savannah, Georgia, in 1864. He was with "Sherman's March to the Sea," from Bentonville, North Carolina. On this march, though Colonel, he was in command of the 2nd Brigade, 2nd Division, 14th Army Corps. While in command of the brigade, July 4th, 1865, General Sherman made his last review of his troops at Louisville, Kentucky, the General complimented the Colonel for the fine appearance, soldierly bearing and discipline of the brigade, and recommended him for promotion as brigadier general.

General Peter participated in the last grand review of the army in Washington, at the close of the war, in command of his brigade, the grandest military pageant the world ever saw. He is prominent in G. A. R. and Masonic circles, and a member of the Bar.

He and his wife are both members of the Presbyterian Church, active and liberal in every good work. They reside in Albany, Illinois.

Their son, Sylvester Arthur, in his young manhood, after his days and special training in Fulton College, Illinois, and the State University, of Wisconsin, went south, to Laurel, Mississippi, to engage in business. In 1898, he enlisted in the U. S. army, during the Spanish-American War, and being a musician was promoted to the military band. He was taken ill in camp at Chickamauga, from which he never fully recovered. He returned to Laurel, where he followed the vocation of civil engineer, until his last illness, which occurred finally about two months before his death. He returned to his Albany home, August 5th, in the hope, as he said, "of getting well," but in a few days, on August 14th, 1908, the end came and he passed away.

He was beloved for his ever bright and genial spirit, which made friends wherever his lot was cast. Owing to his faculty of seeing the bright side of life, his family will ever cherish his memory as being the life of the household. Had he lived one week longer, he would have reached thirty-two years of age.

SKETCHES.

Rev. Joseph S. Roddy graduated at Princeton College and Theological Seminary. As a Presbyterian minister, he had charge of a church in Harrisburg for several years, and is pastor's assistant at the Arch Street Presbyterian Church, Philadelphia.

Rev. Mr. Roddy is a very active and energetic worker in several important fields of business and historic research, a great student, a fine writer, and preacher, a wonderful collector and compiler of a vast amount of valuable statistics in literary and historic lines.

Just before the lamented death of his brother, they had entered into the purchase and re-organization of the old Bloomfield Academy, for advanced educational work. Rev. Mr. Roddy has therefore been compelled to assume the responsibility of this undertaking as its president, directing its work in addition to his ministerial duties in Philadelphia.

George Black Roddy was the younger brother of Rev. Joseph Stockton, and second son of George B. and Martha Ege Roddy.

The Roddy family is one of the oldest and most historic families in this section of Pennsylvania (Perry County), and descended from Alexander Roddy, one of the pioneers who settled in the upper part of the county in 1756, and George Black, who settled in the same locality in 1766. The subject of this sketch was born on the old Black farm, at Mt. Pleasant, Jackson Township. His father died in 1867. His mother continued to reside on the farm, except for a short interval until 1878, when they moved to Philadelphia, remaining there but a short time, during which George entered the public school. Although the youngest boy in his division he stood at the head of his classes in the grammar school. They then located finally in New Bloomfield, the county seat of Perry. After being under the tutorship of Capt. G. C. Palm for a time, he attended the Bloomfield Academy, under the principalship of the late Dr. Edgar, and later Dr. Flickinger. He entered Princeton University in 1882. His college course was marked by a series of intellectual triumphs. He won the Sophomore mathematical prize, was Junior first honor man, and graduated in 1886, as first honor man in his class, and classical fellow, which latter honor carried with it a prize of $600. After his graduation he was for a time instructor in Latin and Greek in Princeton University. He then went to Europe to complete his education and became a student in Theology in Berlin University; Student of languages in Paris, France; Rome, Italy, and at Athens, Greece. He spoke Greek, German and French fluently.

On his return to this country, he was re-appointed instructor in Greek in Princeton Theological Seminary, which position he finally abandoned to take up the study of law. He entered as a student in the law office of the Hon. Charles H. Smiley, in 1894, and was admitted to the bar of his native county in 1898. He soon acquired a good practice and was recognized as an able lawyer.

While studying law, he served as principal of the Bloomfield Academy in 1894-95 and '96. He continued the practice of his profession until his death.

In religious faith Mr. Roddy was a Presbyterian, and in politics an independent Republican. He was an ardent champion in the cause of temperance, both of local option and anti-saloon league movements. He was also prominently mentioned as a candidate for president judge, next year (1911).

The sad news of his sudden death spread over the town with incredible rapidity and produced the profoundest sorrow, casting a gloom over the entire community. His death was a terrible blow to his mother, wife and brother.

As a man in the community, he was an example of the highest moral character, scrupulously honest and just in all his dealings with his fellow-man, broad-minded, generous and charitable, fearless in the discharge of his duty as he saw it.

He was a man whom to know was to honor and respect. A profound scholar, and a polished gentleman, possessed of genial social qualities, he was very popular, and his friends were legion.

In his death has passed away one of the foremost educators, one of the most unselfish, public-spirited citizens, and one of the most conscientious, high-minded gentlemen that his native county has produced.

Like the "Call of the Wild," his love for books, learning and teaching was luring him again to educational work which he was just to resume by an inaugural address at the opening of the Academy on the evening of the day, September 5, 1910, on which the summons came. Life work already well done, so ended.

SKETCH.

The subject of this sketch, James Shippen Burd, was of a family line distinguished in the early part of Colonial and Proprietary days of Pennsylvania, and also in the Revolution. His great-great-grand sire on maternal side was Edward Shippen, of Philadelphia, appointed by William Penn, first mayor of the city. Edward Shippen, Jr., born 1729; Chief Justice of Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, 1799; died 1806.

The Shippens held Proprietary lands, by warrants of the Penns, where the town of Shippensburg in the Cumberland Valley, Pa., was begun in 1720, the oldest town in the valley, which by 1830 contained twelve families. As a defense against the Indians, Fort Franklin was built there in 1740. In 1755, Fort Morris on the Shippen land, on a rocky bluff on the west side of the town, and was occupied by a force during 1756-57 during the French and Indian War.

During the Revolution, Col. James Burd held this same fort for a short time. Col. James Burd married Sarah Shippen, daughter of Chief Justice Shippen. His son Joseph Burd bought all the Shippen family interests in these lands, which he occupied, and lived and died there. The next owner was Edward Burd, bachelor brother of Mr. James Shippen Burd's father, from whom James Shippen inherited it, and owned it until 1860, when he sold it and removed to Minneapolis.

Mr. Burd received his preparatory education for college at the private academy of Rev. Dr. McGinnis, at Shade Gap, Huntingdon Co., Pa. His collegiate course was pursued at Jefferson and Lafayette colleges, graduating at the latter. He then entered the Law Department of the same, where he graduated at law. He at once entered upon the practice of his profession, removing to Minneapolis, and continuing to do so until his death in 1876.

In connection with W. R. McFarlane, he became the head of the firm, Burd, McFarlane & Co., in 1867, to engage in real estate, insurance, and law business. He had a large successful career in Probate Courts in settling estates, and the general legal interests of the firm. W. R. McFarlane, dying in the meantime, was succeeded in the firm by Major J. G. McFarlane, and which under the same firm name, continued for many years.

Mr. Burd was a member of the Westminster Presbyterian Church. He died in 1876, universally esteemed for his genial character, and integrity in all his dealings, and in the civic interests of his adopted city, of which he was the first city comptroller. His remains were taken to his native home, and interred in Spring Hill Cemetery, Shippensburg, among his kindred. The Burd family name is perpetuated in monumental memorials, in St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, and the Burd Orphan Asylum, Philadelphia. His widow, Mrs. Henrietta Ege Burd, still resides in Minneapolis.

SKETCH.

Col. Joseph Arthur Ege, Jr., son of Joseph Arthur Ege, Sr., and Jane Elmira (Woodburn) Ege, spent his early life in his native county, Cumberland, Pa. He was just twenty years of age at the beginning of the Civil War. He at once imbibed the war spirit, and enlisted from Newville, Pa., as a private in Company E, 130th Regt., P. V. I. He served until the close of the war, at which time he was Colonel of the 18th Regt. of P. V. I. After the battle of Gettysburg he was appointed Provost Marshal there, and served as such for some months. At the close of the war he was appointed to look up and save for the Government, lost, abandoned, and otherwise Government property, sometimes dishonestly taken, thus restoring to the Government a million dollars worth of property. From 1865, he spent five years in Minneapolis, engaging in real estate and insurance. Having married about this time, Miss Henrietta Richardson, of Greensburg, Pa., he took up his residence there, engaging in the same line of business. In 1878 he removed to Bradford, McKean Co., Pa., where he engaged in banking for several years. During President Harrison's administration, Col. Ege was appointed Custodian of the U. S. Mint. He held this position until the change of administration. He remained in Philadelphia, and re-engaged in real estate and insurance interests until his decease in 1903.

NOTE.

Rev. T. P. Ege, solemnized his marriage to his last wife, and in September, 1903, performed the last rites, at the end of an eventful life, officiating at the burial service of his cousin, Col. Joseph A. Ege, Jr.

SKETCH.

James Henry Ege was born at Pine Grove Furnace, Pa., in 1844. After seven years of age, removed with his father, Joseph Arthur, Sr., from place to place, who as skilled iron operator, was superintendent of various furnaces in succession throughout the State, and finally to Whiteside Co., Illinois. The subject of this sketch was then fourteen years of age; had worked on farms, going to school at intervals in the meantime, and until eighteen, when in August, 1862, he enlisted in Company F, 93rd Regt. of Illinois Volunteers, as a private soldier. He was soon promoted to corporal, and later on for bravery on duty, was promoted to the position of mounted orderly at brigade headquarters, 3rd Brigade of 3rd Division, 15th Army Corps of the Army of Tennessee. He took part in all engagements of his regiment, namely, Raymond, Jackson, and Champion Hills, Miss.; Missionary Ridge, Tenn.; Altoona Pass, and Dalton, Georgia, and in a number of minor engagements and skirmishes, finally winding up with Sherman's March to the Sea, and Grand Review at Washington, D. C., where he was mustered out in 1865, having served but ten days less than three full years.

He never was wounded, though with several narrow escapes. His gun was shot out of his hand at Altoona Pass, just missing his arm. A ball was shot through his hat, and rim shot off on one side, and still remained on his head, without a scratch on his head. His health, however, was greatly impaired, from which he has never fully recovered, suffering at times in helpless condition from rheumatism. After his marriage in Albany, Illinois, in 1867, he removed to Minneapolis, and engaged in real estate, stocks and grain brokerage. Mr. Ege has been a life-long Republican. He cast his first vote for President Lincoln in 1864, and from that time has always taken a great interest in National, State, and Local Politics. He has served as Head Deputy Sheriff, under three Sheriffs, five and a-half years; then elected for two terms of four years High Sheriff of Hennepin County, Minnesota. He was Department Commander of Minnesota G. A. R. in 1888. Was also appointed Judge of Municipal Court at Anoka, Minn., for one year. He has also served as Sergeant-at-Arms of Minnesota State Senate for the sessions of 1907-1909, and now for 1911.

Surely a worthy and influential record in his community and adopted State.

SKETCH.

The Hon. Samuel C. Wagner, the subject of this sketch, was a native of Cumberland Co., Pa., and son of John Wagner, one of the most prominent citizens of Newville, being President of the First National Bank in the same town for a number of years. He descended from one of the oldest families of this portion of the State, his ancestors being among the first settlers. "Wagner's Gap" in the northern range of the Blue mountains was named after his great-grandfather, who owned the land at its base, and this portion of the mountain ridge.

Samuel C. Wagner, entered the army for the Civil War Aug. 8th, 1861, as a private, Company H, Young's Kentucky Cavalry, afterwards known as the Third Pennsylvania, and the first Volunteer cavalry in the army. He was soon promoted to second lieutenant of Company I, of his regiment, then to first lieutenant, as commissary of the regiment, and assigned to the staff of Gen. John B. McIntosh, commanding 1st Brigade, 2nd Cavalry Division.

At Gettysburg, on the afternoon of the 3rd of July, 1863, when Genl. J. E. B. Stuart, commanding the Confederate cavalry, attempted to get in the rear of General Meade's army, ordered Gen. Wade Hampton's brigade to charge the Union cavalry, held by Generals McIntosh and Carter. The Confederate cavalry temporarily broke the Union line at one point, and near a Union battery, seeing which, and the danger of losing the battery, Lieutenant Wagner, at once rallied all the orderlies, guards and detachments, charged the head of Hampton's command, checked it and captured a number of prisoners. General Gregg complimented him on the field for this timely act of bravery and recommended him for further promotion. He afterwards served on the staff of Gen. J. P. Taylor, who succeeded General McIntosh in command of the brigade, and also on the staff of Gen. D. McM. Gregg, commanding 2nd Cavalry Division.

Captain Wagner served to the end of the war. He later entered actively into civic and political life. He was nominated for State Senator, for the Adams and Cumberland District. His opponents were two veteran journalists, John B. Bratton, editor of the American Volunteer, and John K. Peffer, of the Valley Sentinel. Captain Wagner received between six and seven hundred votes more than his two opponents combined. Again in the contest for the Gettysburg District, the Republican party, James W. Bosler, who was a millionaire and very popular, after one of the most exciting political contests ever waged in any district, Mr. Wagner was victorious, and thus served four years in office.

He later moved to Philadelphia, where he still resides, and has occupied various municipal official positions.

LIFE SKETCH OF GEORGE EGE, OF MICHAEL, SR.

George Ege was born January, 1780, at the home of his grandfather, Peter Wolff, at Spring Forge, York County, Pa. He was brought up in the knowledge and experience of iron making by his father, Michael Ege, Sr., at Boiling Springs. After the purchase (1803) of the Mt. Holly Iron Works, by his father, he was placed in charge, and operated them for him, until they became his by inheritance in 1815. He continued to operate the furnace until 1838, when it passed into other hands. Joseph Arthur Ege, his nephew, as superintendent, then had charge of it for some years. The furnace was finally abandoned in 1855, and on the site a large paper mill was erected by Messrs. Given and Mullin, and still (1911) is doing a flourishing business. George Ege, retiring from business, spent the rest of his days in Carlisle, serving as Justice of the Peace for many years, where he died in a ripe old age of seventy-nine years, outliving both his brothers, Peter and Michael, Jr.

HISTORIC SKETCH OF REV. OLIVER EGE.

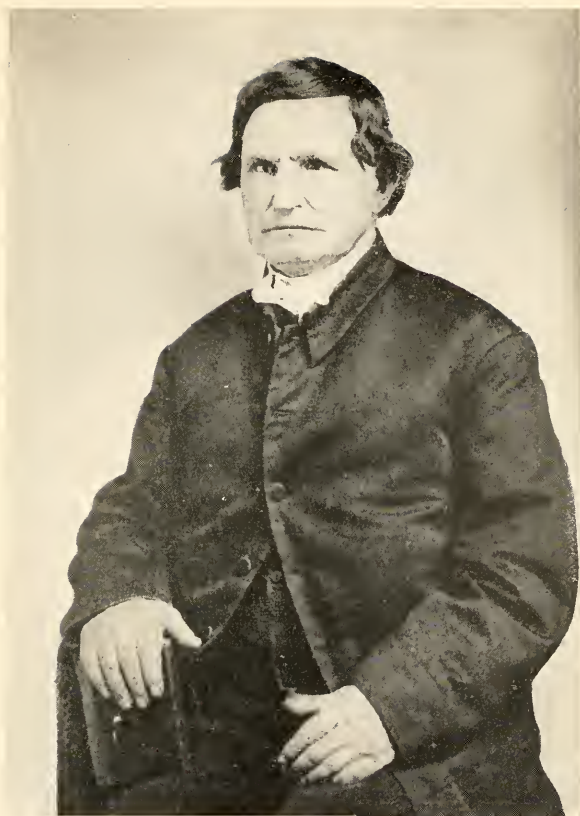

The subject of this sketch was born at Boiling Springs, Cumberland Co., Pa., December 10th, 1801, and died in Mechanicsburg, 1889, in the same county, and only a few miles from the place of his birth, in the eighty-ninth year of his age, and the sixty-second of his ministry.

He became a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Harrisburg in 1819.

Between the dates given was comprehended a life as useful and honored as it was extended.

Not very long after his entering upon a religious life, thoughts touching the Christian ministry crystallized into conviction. Feeling the need of better literary advantages, he made use of his savings to procure the same. He then became a student in the home of Dr. Asa Herring, of Mechanicsburg, who gave instruction to a limited number of young men, whom he thus trained for the study of medicine or for entrance into college. He pursued his studies for two years, but during this time, he frequently exercised his gifts, holding prayer and exhortation meetings in the town and vicinity, having been licensed therefor March 23rd, 1825.

About two years later, he was recommended for admission into the Baltimore Conference of the M. E. Church. Two years of probationary trial having elapsed, on March 22, 1829, he was ordained "Deacon" in Baltimore, by Bishop Robert Roberts, and two years later, March 20, 1831, was ordained "Elder" by Bishop Elijah Hedding.

On February 7th, 1833, he was united in marriage to Susannah P. Thompson, daughter of Hugh and Ann Dodson Thompson of Berwick, Pa., Rev. William Prettyman performing the ceremony. His wife became indeed a thorough helpmeet to him, through all his years of active labor, sharing bravely the privations of the early years, in the many homes of his ministry among strangers as their lot was so frequently cast.

Two sons and two daughters were born of this union. The home life of husband and wife with their children was one of love and tenderness, and with the blessedness of religious influence and example, was such as to bring forth the fruit of good living, and the exemplification of the true Christian home. And so also in their intercourse with those among whom their lot was so frequently cast. Uniform kindness of heart ever characterized it, and there was a road to their hearts not hard to find.

The services he rendered the Church of his choice as an itinerant minister and pastor can scarcely be estimated or enumerated in a brief sketch, and in those pioneer days they were truly heroic. His first charge in 1827 embraced a circuit of six hundred miles, territory now forming the bounds of a conference. The deprivations endured, the dangers incurred, and expedients resorted to in the face of unforeseen difficulties, oftentimes of storm and flood, in order to meet appointments can scarcely be realized in these days of ease and comfort. His early ministry was one in which he preached in groves, private houses, barns, and seldom in houses consecrated to the worship of God.

A scattered flock, few members, and scarcity of money, made the building of Church edifices well nigh impossible. For thirty-three years of this active itineracy he labored faithfully for God and man. He was a splendid type of that class of godly men who, for the joy that was set before them endured the Cross, despised the shame, gloried in tribulation, and with heroic perseverance toiled on until they saw the pleasure of the Lord prospering in their hands.

In 1860, Rev. Oliver Ege retired from his active ministry in appointed charges. He then embarked with his adult sons in the management of the Cumberland Valley Institute for Boys and Young Men. In this new field there was still ample scope for the exercise of his godly life, and example, and which in exhortation and pious counsel he never lost an opportunity for good. Until disabled by age and disease in the few last years of his life, he was very frequently called upon to exercise his ministerial gifts.

As a private citizen he clearly understood and appreciated his duty and privilege, and with fidelity and spirit discharged every obligation devolving upon him. He passed away full of years, with duty all and fully done, to his eternal rest, fully deserved and faithfully won.

His devoted wife survived him for a few years more, when, within a few weeks of her eightieth year, she peacefully fell asleep in death. Their mortal remains now rest side by side in the cemetery at Danville, Pa.

lisle, Pa., graduating from there in 1855, and at once began his active career in life as a teacher.

In 1860, associated with his father and brother, he became the Principal of the Cumberland Valley Institute, a boarding and home school for boys, and young men, in Mechanicsburg, Pa. In 1865, he retired from the Institute to accept the Presidency of Irving Female College in the same town, his father and brother remaining in the former school. In 1883, he resigned the presidency of the college and entered the ministry of the Episcopal Church, in which he is still engaged, having filled parishes in Germantown, Gettysburg, Philadelphia, and a suburban parish, near the latter in Montgomery County, retiring therefrom in 1909, and since in almost constant calls for supply service in New York City and vicinity.

His marriage, in 1864, was solemnized by his father in Philadelphia. At the late commencement of Dickinson College, in June, 1910, he was honored by his Alma Mater with the degree of Doctor in Divinity.

Prof. Alexander H. Ege, graduated also from Dickinson College in the class of 1859, sharing first honors with another. He became a prominent and successful educator for many years, after which he became quite an inventor, and spent other years in promoting his patent interests, at the same time not losing his interest in literary work.

He is an accomplished scholar, and a fine writer, contributing valuable articles on a variety of timely subjects for the press. He recently published a descriptive volume of the Knights Templar Pilgrimage of 1904 to San Francisco, with graphic word pictures of scenes and journeyings along the Pacific Coast from San Francisco, southward and northward, which met with high appreciation and commendation. He also travelled extensively in this country and in Europe.

SKETCH.

Dr. Samuel Yorks Thompson was the son of John and Hannah (Yorks) Thompson, of Danville, Pa.

He was educated in the schools of his native town, and at the Cumberland Valley Institute, Mechanicsburg, Pa. He early evinced an aptitude and desire for the study of medicine, and while a student at the Institute, supplemented his studies there, by reading in the office and under the direction of Dr. P. H. Long. He attended lectures and graduated in Medicine in New York City, and immediately began the practice of his profession in Danville, where he achieved great success and a reputation which extended far and wide throughout that portion of the State, and in consequence thereof, he was constantly called in consultation, and frequently from fifty to a hundred miles distant.

He was also a public-spirited citizen of his town and county. He was twice elected associate judge of his county and was filling his second term at the time of his death, which occurred suddenly in his office, while writing a prescription for a patient then present.

He died from heart failure brought on by over work, and a self-sacrificing spirit that knew no rest, nor suffered any call for help to pass unheeded. He married Anna E. Ege, whose mother was a first cousin of the Doctor's father, and at whose marriage, Rev. Oliver Ege, her father officiated.

The family of Galbraith is of the remotest antiquity, the name being derived from the Celtic. It was in the parish of Baldunoch, County Sterling, that the Galbraiths of Baldunoch, chiefs of the name, had their residence. I find from a map of the 16th Century, showing the old divisions of Scotland and locations of the Highland clans, that the Galbraiths (Gaelbraith) were located around the south and west shores of Loch Lomond, in the present county of Lennox. In "Frazier's statistical account of the inhabitants of the isle of Gigha" the following occurs, "The majority of them are of the name of Galbraith and McNeill, the former reckoned the more ancient." The Galbraiths in the Gaelic language are called "Breatannich, that is Britons" or the children of the Briton, and were once reckoned a great name in Scotland, according to the following lines translated from the Gaelic:

"Galbraiths from the Red Tower
Noblest of Scottish surnames."

In the maps of the 16th Century above referred to, Isle Gigha is assigned to "Clan Neil."

The first of the name with whom we have to do is 1st, John Galbraith, of Donegal, Ireland, who probably died before the emigration of his sons to America in 1718. His two sons were:

James, born 1666, married Rebecca Chambers, whose descendants we follow below, and John, who married and left issue, and whose descendants settled in Kentucky.

II James Galbraith, son of I John, of Scotch parentage, was born in 1666 in the north of Donegal, Ireland, from whence he emigrated about the year 1718, settled in Conestoga, afterwards Donegal township, then Chester County, Province of Pennsylvania. He was one of the founders of old Derry Church, a man of prominence and the head of a remarkable family. He died August 23rd, 1744, and is buried in the old graveyard at Derry. Of his children we have the following:

- i John, born 1690, married Janet ——?
- ii Andrew, born 1692, married and left issue; colonist.
- iii James, born 1703, married Elizabeth Bertram.
- iv Elenor, married Feb. 27th, 1735, Patrick McKinley, had issue, John, Joseph, Janet.
- v Isabel, married Oct. 21st, 1735, Alexander McMillen.
- vi Rebecca, died 1748, married —— Steward, had issue, Charles, Robert, William, Frances, Margaret.

III James Galbraith (I John, II James) was born in the north of Ireland in 1703 and died June 11th, 1786, in East Pennsboro township, Cumberland Co., Pa., buried in Derry Church graveyard. He took up a tract of land now in Derry township, Dauphin County, on Spring Creek, not far from the church glebe, the warrant therefor being granted him March 13th, 1737. He became a man of note on the frontier, and early provincial records of Pennsylvania contain frequent reference to him. He was elected sheriff of the county in October, 1742; for many years was one of the Justices for the County of Lancaster and served as an officer during the Indian wars of 1755-63. Towards the revolutionary period he removed to Cumberland County. He married, April 6th, 1734, in Christ Church, Philadelphia, Elizabeth Bertram, born 1714, in the north of Ireland, died Feb. 2nd, 1799, in East Pennsboro Township, Cumberland County, Pa., the daughter of Rev. William Bertram. She was a woman of rare accomplishments and excellence. They had issue:

- i William, born 1736. Nothing is known of him.
- ii Bertram, born Sept. 24th, 1738, married 1st, Ann Scott; 2nd, Henrietta Huling, died March 9th, 1804.
- iii Robert, born 1740, died January 1804, in Huntingdon County, Penna. Commissioned President Judge of County, Nov. 23rd, 1787.
- iv Dorcas, born 1742, married John Buchanan.
- v Elizabeth, born 1744, died 1829, married Charles Torrance.
- vi Thomas, born 1746, died about 1797.
- vii John, born 1748, married and had issue.
- viii (IV) Andrew, born 1750, married Barbara Kyle.

Of the above, Bertram, Robert, John and Andrew served in the Revolutionary war. The former, Col. Bertram Galbraith, was a man of great prominence, serving not only in the army but as a member of various conventions prior and subsequent to the Declaration of Independence, and as member of the Assembly 1776-7, and after the war as Commissioner to view the Juniata and Susquehanna rivers etc.

IV Andrew Galbraith (I John, II James, III James), born 1750 in Derry Township, Lancaster Co., Pa.; died March 7th, 1806, in East Pennsboro Township, Cumberland Co., Pa.; married in 1780, Barbara Kyle, born in Donegal Township, Lancaster Co., Pa., died Nov. 7th, 1832, daughter of John Kyle. Andrew was commissioned Major in the Pennsylvania reserves (his commission as Major, signed by Benjamin Franklin, is now in possession of B. K. Miller, Sr., of Milwaukee, Wisconsin) was taken prisoner at the battle of Long Island and confined in a prisonship in New York harbor, suffering great hardships while in captivity. Of the marriage of Andrew G. and Barbara Kyle the issue were:

- i (V) Jean, born 1781, married Matthew Miller 1799, died at Carlisle 1864.
- ii Elizabeth, born 1784, married Dr. Kelso, of Harrisburg, Pa., died April 18th, 1818.
- iii Juliana, born 1786, married William McNeill Irvine.
- iv Mary, born 1789, married Feb. 13th, 1810, to Michael Ege.

the Territory of Wisconsin and took his oath of office on Dec. 10th, 1838, at Madison, Wis., continuing in that position until the admission of Wisconsin to statehood, and on June 12th, 1848, he was commissioned by President Polk, Judge of the U. S. District Court of Wisconsin, and thereafter, and until 1863, he was the sole U. S. Judge in Wisconsin, no Circuit Judge sitting with him until that year. On Jan. 1st, 1874, Judge Miller resigned and retired under the provisions of law. While apparently in his usual good health he was stricken down and died at his residence in the city of Milwaukee, on Sept. 30th, 1874, after an illness of a few hours. His children were:

i (VII) Andrew Galbraith, born Gettysburg, Pa., Dec. 21st, 1827; married Dec. 5th, 1853, Cornelia Augusta McVickar, died Oct. 21st, 1865.

SKETCH.

Col. Andrew Galbraith Ege, Sr., third son of Michael, 3rd, Jr., was born at Boiling Springs, and died at his home in Highland, "Prairie Manor," Doniphan County, Kansas, November, 1876. He received his education at the Academy of Dr. McGraw, West Nottingham, Cecil County, and at Mt. St. Mary's College, Emmittsburg, Md.

PENNSYLVANIA BRANCH.

Soon after his marriage in 1834, he removed from Carlisle to Tawneytown, Carroll County, Md., where he purchased a large estate and built on it a fine mansion. He conducted it as a model farm, finely equipped and stocked with choice cattle and horses. He soon became identified with the interests of his adopted State, and for many years with its political history. He represented the State as a Legislator in 1845-46; was a member of Constitutional Reform Convention 1850-51; was twice a presidential elector, and held other prominent positions. He was always noted for his firm adherence to settled convictions, and for his earnest and untiring support of principles he deemed to be right. Col. Ege was a bitter opponent of the "Know Nothing Party" in the days of its strength. He was a great reader, and was well informed in the history of the past, and in its progress in the present. His mind was stored with a vast fund of practical knowledge, the result of long experience and close observation. In 1856, he caught the "Western fever," sold his Maryland estate, and gathering followers, he emigrated to Kansas, and taking up large bodies of land, colonized them there.

He thus became thoroughly identified with the interests and development of the new State. He was a man of untiring energy, and had improved twenty-one farms in his life, and had owned a large amount of land in Pennsylvania, Maryland, Iowa, Missouri, Kansas and Michigan. He spent a large fortune in Kansas, and did much for the material development of Doniphan County, where, at the time of his death three of his sons were settled on farms. He was a lover of horses and of the chase, and often said "that he had owned more fine dogs than any man in America."

As a horseman and a good shot, he was unsurpassed. In fact his pleasures were those of the past generation. He was a social, polite, genial gentleman of the "olden time," so few of whom are left, and withal he was a truly charitable man. He never saw distress without offering to relieve and assist the afflicted.

His heart, though brave, was as tender as a woman's. A long and busy life ended with his death. During his last sickness, he remarked "that he relied on the justice and mercy of God and believed in the Atonement."

"One who loved him while living, and mourns him gone before, who understood his great generosity and affection, with a sad heart lays this tribute of love upon his bier."

"Weep not at Nature's transient pain, congenial spirits part to meet again. The grass upon his grave will freshen and wither, but the memory of the departed will ever remain fresh in the heart. May we meet in the hereafter. 'Mors omnibus communis.'"

LIFE SKETCH OF THE HON. FREDERICK WATTS.

Hon. Frederick Watts, eldest son of David Watts and Juliana Miller, and grandson of General Frederick Watts and Jane Murray, was born at Carlisle, May 9, 1801, and always lived there. He received his education at Dickinson College, from which institution he graduated in 1819, at the age of eighteen. The two years immediately following his graduation from college he spent with his uncle, William Miles, of Erie County, engaged at farming, which vocation possessed a special attraction for him throughout his long and busy life. In 1821, he returned to Carlisle, entered the office of Andrew Carothers, Esq., as a student-at-law, and was admitted to the bar in 1824. He became his preceptor's partner, and by his energy and ability soon won high rank as a lawyer. From 1829 to 1854 he was a reporter of the decisions of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. The first three volumes issued bore his name as sole reporter; and subsequently nine volumes bore his name in connection with that of Henry J. Sergeant, Esq. In 1845 he was made president of the Cumberland Valley railroad, which by his intelligent management he raised from a languishing condition to a high degree of efficiency, making it an important factor in the development of the section through which it passes. He retired from its presidency in 1873, but continued a director in the company until his death. On March 9th, 1849, he was appointed President Judge of the Ninth Judicial District, then composed of the counties of Cumberland, Perry and Juniata. This office he filled until 1852, when the elective judiciary began. He was an ardent friend of higher education, and from 1824 to 1828 was secretary of the board of trustees of Dickinson College, and from 1828 to 1832 a member of the board, and active and influential in all its proceedings. In 1854, he was instrumental in establishing the Pennsylvania State Agricultural College, and was elected first president of its board of trustees. He was in close touch with the farmers of his section, and constantly sought to advance the best interests of agriculture. For many years he was president of the Cumberland County Agricultural Society, and its most devoted friend and patron. In 1854, he projected the Carlisle Gas and Water Company, and for a long time was president of it. To indulge his taste for agricultural pursuits he, in 1865, removed to one of his farms near Carlisle, and began gradually to relinquish his law practice. In 1871, he was tendered the appointment of United States Commissioner of Agriculture. This he declined, but the offer afterward renewed and urged upon him he accepted and held the place until 1877, when, because of advancing years, he retired from all active duties of life.

Perhaps no man left more lasting and favorable impression upon the community in which his busy life was passed than Frederick Watts. As a lawyer he occupied a front rank for nearly half a century—excepting the time he was on the Bench. There is not a report of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania in forty-two years that does not contain his name as counsel. He was a man of great force of character and abiding self-confidence. Whatever he believed he believed implicitly and whatever he did he did with all his might. He never sat down to the counsel table that he did not impress the court and jury that he confidently expected to win his case. His power with the jury was great. His reputation for ability, integrity and unblemished honor was known to every man in the counties in which he practised, and he invariably sustained this reputation, which was always dignified, and speech that was always clear, strong, convincing and never tedious. He possessed the respect of his brethren of the Bar in an unusual degree, and as a man and a citizen he was universally regarded as unselfish, public-spirited and patriotic.

Frederick Watts was twice married. He first married Eliza Cranston, of Newcastle County, Delaware, who bore him three children. Mrs. Watts died in November, 1832, and he afterwards married Henrietta Ege, daughter of Michael Ege, of Cumberland County, who bore him the following children: William Miles, Mary, Julia Miller, Frederick, Coleman Hall, Edward Biddle, Sarah Campbell, Edward Biddle (2), Sarah Campbell (2), Henrietta and Brown Parker. Judge Watts died August 17, 1889. His wife, Henrietta Ege, died March 7, 1890, and he and his two wives are buried in the old Carlisle cemetery.

SKETCH.

6. Peter F. Ege, the fifth son of Michael, 3rd, Jr., of Boiling Springs, was born at the family homestead there, in 1818. He was educated in private schools, and at Jefferson College, Washington County, Pa. After graduation he studied law and was admitted to the Bar of the Cumberland County Court, at Carlisle.

He practiced for a short time, when it fell to him to take charge of the homestead estate and iron works, which finally became his property. He operated this successfully until about 1860. He married in the meantime, and in the old homestead built by his grandfather, brought up quite a family of great grandchildren, the last of the name to possess the fine old mansion. He then retired from business, and resided in Carlisle until his decease in 1881. He was a fine scholar, a great reader, an expert iron master and business man; generous to a fault, kind to his hands and to the poor in the community around him in sickness and trouble, who never were turned away without the help they needed, and so were universally grieved at his departure from their midst.

SKETCH.

Dr. William Chestnut Chambers was born in the Cumberland Valley, near Harrisburg, Pa., of the same ancestry as the founders of Chambersburg, Pa. He was educated in Dickinson College, Carlisle, in the same class with James Buchanan, later President of the United States. The Doctor graduated in medicine, in the Medical Department of the University of Pennsylvania.

He began the practice of his profession in Carlisle, and soon after married. Though much esteemed as a physician, after a few years he relinquished his practice to take the management of the Cumberland furnace and estate, which his wife inherited from her father, Michael Ege, Sr. Dr. Chambers was an elder in the Presbyterian Church, at Carlisle, for many years. In 1838, he moved with his family to Philadelphia, resumed his practice, and died there in 1857.

HISTORIC SKETCH OF THE REVEREND TALBOT
WILSON CHAMBERS, S.T.D., LL.D.

The Rev. Dr. Chambers was born in Carlisle, Pennsylvania, and grew up to young manhood in the intelligent and cultured society of that college town. He was but eleven years of age when he entered Dickinson College. In the spring of 1832, he was honorably dismissed from Dickinson, and on the 4th of May was admitted to the Sophomore Class in Rutgers College, New Brunswick, New Jersey. This change was made because of his desire to continue under the instruction of the noted Dr. Alexander McClellan, who had removed from Dickinson to fill the chair of languages.

Dr. Chambers graduated from Rutgers in 1834, at the age of fifteen, the youngest in a class of twenty, and with the honors of his class. Soon after his graduation, he entered upon the study of Theology, at Rutgers, still under the instruction of Dr. McClellan, his favorite professor, but finishing his course finally at Princeton Seminary. He became, as his years went on, a thorough Theologian, by natural bent and training and constant study, and consequently a preacher of great force and power. After his seminary graduation, he spent two years as a teacher in private families in the South, continuing meanwhile his preparation for the ministry. He was finally licensed to preach, while in the South, by the Presbytery of Clinton, Mississippi, October 21st, 1838.

He accepted his first call from the Second Reformed Church of Raritan, at Somerville, N. J., and entered on his ministry on October, 1839. He served this charge until 1849, when he was called to be one of the ministers of the Collegiate Reformed Churches of New York City. In this new field he soon became prominent, and continued actively therein until his death in 1896, at which time he was the oldest surviving minister of these Associate Churches, and had been for several years their head, and leader in the councils of the denomination.

During these eventful years, besides his large sphere of influence, both in the Church and various official positions in the denomination councils, his wonderful labors and success in literature, and in a wide range thereof, was notable, and marked his scholarship and ability in a high degree.

He was trustee of Rutgers College from 1868, and of Columbia College, New York, from 1881, until his death. He was also a member of the Board of Trustees of the Leake and Watts Orphan Home, and of the Presbyterian Hospital. He was Vedder Lecturer at Rutgers, New Brunswick—which lectures were later published under the title, “The Psalter, a Witness to the Divine Origin of the Bible.”

He was instructor in New Testament Exegesis in the Union Theological Seminary of New York, in 1887, and in the same year at Hartford, in 1892 at Princeton. In October, 1894, he gave a course of ten lectures at the Lane Theological Seminary on the law. He received the honorary degree of S.T.D. in 1883 from Columbia College, and of LL.D. from Rutgers College in 1888.

He published at different times a Sketch of the Noon Prayer-Meetings in Fulton Street, a Memorial of Theodore Frelinghuysen, An Exposition of the Prophecy of Zechariah, in Lange’s Commentary, and numerous articles on the prominent religious reviews. He was also one of the American Company of Bible Revision, Old Testament Division, which extended over a period of ten years.

Together with Dr. Schaaf, he was active in the organization of the Alliance of Reformed Churches holding the Presbyterian system. He was elected President of the Alliance in 1892, and was still its president at the time of his death in 1896, and had his life been spared, he was to have presided at its Sixth General Council to be held in Glasgow, Scotland, in June of the same year, and to have delivered the president’s address.

HIS FAMILY AND DOMESTIC LIFE.

Dr. Chambers was the son of William Chestnut Chambers, M.D., a native of Cumberland County, Pa., and Mary Ege, of the same, daughter of Michael Ege, Sr., iron master, and of large landed estate.

Rev. Oliver Ege, a minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church for sixty years, was first cousin to Dr. Talbot Chambers. On the 21st of May, 1841, Dr. Chambers was united in marriage to Miss Laura Mercur, daughter of General John Frelinghuysen, of New Jersey. It would be impossible to say how much she contributed by her energy, poise and beauty of character to his happiness and usefulness from that time onward. His love for her endured with all the force of a youthful passion to the end of her life, which occurred in 1892 at Portland, Oregon. She had accompanied him there, he being a delegate from the General Synod of the Reformed Church, to the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church assembled there. Thus, and there, after more than fifty years of this happy union, she was sadly and suddenly taken from him, among strangers and far from home and friends, This blow was one from whose effects he never fully recovered. Till then, his domestic life, apart from occasional severe bereavements, had been unusually happy. The most entire confidence, the purest affection, marked all his intercourse with those of his household. It was the perfect exemplification of the Christian home. But not even the love and devotion of his children, which abounded towards him till the last, could fill the place thus suddenly made vacant in his heart. From that time onward, his thoughts turned more and more toward the home above, till it pleased God, not long after, to receive him into its glory and its peace.—Largely compiled from Rev. Dr. Coe's Memorial discourse, and from data in Rev. T. F. Chambers' "Early Germans of New Jersey."

BARON VON STIEGEL.

The history of this very remarkable man, Baron Heinrich Wilhelm Von Stiegel, holds such an important place in the lives and interests of the Ege brothers, George and Michael, that it deserves historic perpetuation in this family connection.

Baron Von Stiegel was born A. D. 1729, May 13, at Cologne, Germany, evidently of noble and wealthy parentage. At the age of twenty-one he determined to gather his portion of worldly goods, amounting to 40,000 pounds, and ventured forth into this new world, attracted by the many stories of its golden opportunities. On the 31st of August, 1750, he sailed from Cowes, in the ship Nancy Thomas Canton, Master, which landed in Philadelphia, in whose list of (270) passengers Heinrich Wilhelm Stiegel's name is of record. During the first two years he travelled about seeking a suitable location for a home and business. He built a house in Philadelphia, making it his residence for some years.

In Nov. 7, 1852, he married Elizabeth Huber, daughter of Jacob Huber, an iron master, of Brickersville, Lancaster County.

In 1757, the Baron bought the furnace property of his father-in-law. This he tore down and erected a new and much larger one on the original site, and named it Elizabeth, after his wife, the township also bearing the same name from this circumstance. The next year, Feb. 3rd, 1758, his faithful wife died, leaving him with two little girls, Barbara and Elizabeth. She died at her father's house in Brickersville, and was laid to rest in the Lutheran churchyard there.

The new furnace was soon in active operation, and among the Baron's first enterprises was the manufacture of stoves. This became at once a great success, attracting great interest from all directions for their beauty and utility, and soon created a large demand and sale. Some of these stoves are still preserved in the vicinity as valuable relics and curiosities. Ere long the Baron was the most progressive and prosperous iron master in Pennsylvania.

On October 24th, 1758, the Baron married as second wife, Elizabeth Hölz-in, of Philadelphia, sister of Anna Catharine, the wife of George-Michael Ege. The marriage ceremony took place at the Hölz (or Wood) home in Roxborough, a near suburb of Philadelphia. The record of this marriage is preserved in the archives of "St. Michael's Lutheran Church, Germantown," in which record is named Michael Ege, as Witness.

In 1759, January 19th, a few months after the Baron married, George-Michael Ege died, and at the urgent solicitation of the Baron and wife, Anna Catharine, the widow, and her two young boys, George and Michael, came to make their home at Elizabeth with them.

The Baron became the guardian of his nephews, brought them up with a good education and taught them the iron business. The Baron had here built a large and substantial stone house, for a residence, which, from its imposing appearance, soon came to be called "The Mansion" by the people of the vicinity. This building is still in good preservation. It has been owned by the Coleman family and descendants from the date of its purchase, and the Baron's furnace estate, about 1778, at the end of his active career.

EGE GENEALOGY.

In 1777, General Washington spent a night there as the guest of the Baron. The house is still prized for its historic interest, and the room in which Washington slept is shown to frequent visitors. The old furnace did service for a full century.

By 1760, Elizabeth Furnace was in a highly prosperous condition, the busy hum of industry gladdened the hearts of the many laborers and the community. Twenty-five substantially built comfortable homes sheltered the hands and their families, of which in all there were about seventy-five. The estate embraced some 900 acres of land, most of it in forests of fine timber, where many hands also labored in cutting down and converting into charcoal for the use of the furnace. This same year the Baron bought a one-half interest in "Charming forge," near Womelsdorf, on the Tulpehocken Creek, Berks County. His partners were the Stedman Brothers.

From its beauty of situation the Baron gave it this name. In 1762, the Stedman Brothers, Charles and Alexander, purchased a tract of 729 acres of land in Lancaster County, in which, the Baron, having previously been associated with them, became a partner for a one-third interest for fifty pounds sterling. Soon after, he purchased their holdings (for 107 pounds 10 shillings), and became the sole owner. When being his skillful surveyor he laid out the land for a town, built the first substantial house there, and named it "Mannheim," after a probable residence in Germany, and its complete counterpart, in plan. Two small log buildings preceded his occupation of the land. On this very beautiful spot, on the banks of the Chickies Creek, we find the Mannheim of his ambition and vision of almost a century and a-half ago, now one of the finest and most substantial towns of the size in the State.

He began his Mannheim residence, also called "The Mansion," in 1763, building slowly and substantially, until finished in 1765. It was situated on the northeast corner of the large centre square and East High street, the house itself being forty feet square, two stories, and with a dormer window attic, made of red brick imported from England, and transported in wagons from Philadelphia, by his own teams. The second floor was divided by a long hall, on the front one long room, which was fitted up as a chapel, with arched ceiling. It contained a pulpit, from which the Baron himself often preached to his workmen, and surrounding community the sound doctrines of the Lutheran faith, to which frequent worshippers also came on foot from ten to fifteen miles. The rear side of the hall on second floor, contained two good size rooms. The first floor rooms were similarly divided and elaborately finished, and furnished with handsome carved wood work and doors, mantles and tiles, and the large parlor, with tapestry representing falconry and hunting scenes. Back of the main building were the kitchens and rooms for the attendants. On the roof, between the large chimneys at each end, was the famous balcony, from which on festive occasions, his finely educated band, brought from Europe, and also chosen from his workmen, entertained the Baron and his many favored guests with choicest strains of music.

For many years much of the finest china and the tiles, illustrating Scripture texts and scenes, remained in the house, the possession of a Mr. Arndt; also of the tapestry, much of which later was in the careful keeping in the Society rooms of the Historical Library in Philadelphia. Since then the fine mansion has been changed for business, a third story added, but much of the original walls remain, while a large collection of the Stiegel furniture, china tiles and glassware can be seen in the Danner and Long Museums, in Manheim.

All this now is highly prized, and tells to the many visitors the high aspirations, refined and cultivated taste of the founder of their town.

The success of Elizabeth Furnace, and his other iron interests and enterprise, influenced him to plan for the fostering of industry and for the development of his Manheim venture. Between 1765 and 1768, he erected a large factory for the manufacture of glassware, the first work of the kind in this country. The building was so large that a four horse team could drive in it and turn around. It had a large dome shaped roof ninety feet high, entirely built of the same imported brick. Skilled workmen were brought from Europe to carry on the business. By 1769, the factory was run to its full capacity, with its thirty-five skilled and artistic operatives, each of whom were bound by stipulated contract to produce first-class work in all parts required, in artistic designs and hand-painting and decoration, for which they were to receive forty pounds, house rent and fire wood annually for such services. The products of the factory were very beautiful, embracing every variety of the finest glassware, in various colors. A remarkable characteristic of all this ware was a metallic ring which has never been successfully imitated. It found ready market in Boston, New York, and Philadelphia, besides great quantities sold in all the region of the nearer vicinity, so that much of this beautiful ware is still in existence, and largely in the hands of relic-hunters, and held at almost fabulous prices. Much also can be seen in the fine collections of the museums before mentioned in Manheim. In 1769 and '70, the Baron was considered one of the wealthiest and most influential men in Pennsylvania. All his enterprises, furnaces, and forges were being operated at their full capacity. He was accumulating wealth very rapidly. He had invested all his original 40,000 pounds, and various large instalments received from Europe, as well as his earnings from his various industries, in lands and otherwise,—in fact in almost anything to which he was solicited,—much of which when the dark clouds of the Revolution began to break into the storm of war, proved to his detriment and final failure. About this same time, when enlarging his sphere of activity, on the large holdings of his so named Stiegel Company, he gave a mortgage on one-third of it all, viz., 14,078 acres of land to one Daniel Benezet for 3,000 pounds.

After the Baron's second marriage, he and his family alternated their residence between Philadelphia and Elizabeth Furnace, until about 1765, when he began his Manheim improvements, when Elizabeth became their more permanent residence, dividing their time after the Manheim mansion was finished, between the two. Accumulating wealth very fast about this time made the Baron more ambitious still, and was living very extravagantly. He was largely entertaining friends from city and country, and banqueting them in almost royal style, at one or the other of his homes. In 1769, he built his tower-like castle, on a high hill of some 600 feet, not far from his Elizabeth Furnace, known to this day—as "Thurm Berg" "Cannon Hill," "Stick Berg," and "Tower Hill." The tower was fifty feet square at the base, seventy-five feet high, ending with a platform, ten feet square at the top, built solidly of heavy timber, some of which timbers later found use in large barns and still to be seen there well preserved to this day.

This was built both for a place of safety, and for the entertainment of friends. It contained several large banquet halls. On the summit was mounted the signal cannon, from which the welcome salutes were fired on these festive occasions. It was also the signal of a joyous time to all concerned, and pay day for workmen.

While the Baron lived in Philadelphia, and managed his works in Lancaster and adjoining counties, it was his custom to ride in his chariot, drawn by four fine horses, of which he was a great fancier.

He was always suspicious of his surroundings, fearing robbery or danger of life. He traveled with his out-riders, and a pack of his favorite dogs running ahead. His arrival at Manheim was greeted with great joy, the workmen gathered in the roof balcony and welcomed him with sweet musical strains from the fine instruments he had bought for them. It was a brief holiday for a good time. He treated his men with great consideration and kindness, and they honored him. His presence was their highest joy. As before alluded to, he took great interest in their Spiritual welfare.

In 1770, he set aside a lot and built a small church on it, naming it "Zion Lutheran Church." He appointed a board of trustees, and made them and the congregation responsible for one-half of the cost and value of the same.

Finally the debt proving a burden to the infant congregation, at their urgent solicitation, he gave them a deed as follows: "Copy of Deed from Henry William Stiegel, and Elizabeth his wife, dated December 4th, 1772, to Peter Ereman, Henry Whorley, and Wendel Marzall, trustees and wardens, to and for the only use, purpose and benefit of the German Lutheran Congregation, conveying Lot No. 220, in Manheim, in consideration of five Shillings, and they yielding and Paying therefor unto the said Henry William Stiegel, his heirs and assigns at the town of Manheim, in the month of June yearly forever hereafter, the rent of "One Red Rose." if the same shall be lawfully demanded."

This obligation of the Rose Payment was observed for a few times, and when, because of his impending trouble, it was not demanded, it was soon discontinued and forgotten, and the deed and pledge also. And so for more than a century, the deed in its safe hiding place remained forgotten and unknown, when by some fortunate chance, in 1891, the deed was discovered.

Descendants were inquired for and looked up, and the payment revived, and the Anniversary of this payment ever since has become an occasion of great interest, held annually on the second Sunday of June, and payment made to a living descendant of the Baron, to whom now in memory and tribute it is so lawfully due.

This interesting ceremony attracts hundreds of people from far and near, and has brought to light and life the almost forgotten history of this remarkable man.

In this same Christian spirit, the Baron had very materially aided the Lutheran Church at Brickerville, and in addition to his liberal contributions held a note from their trustees for 100 pounds, for a loan. On one of his visits to the Church he was so pleased with the kindness and demeanor of the people, he gladdened their hearts by presenting the note to them, to be reckoned against them no more forever.

EGE GENEALOGY.

Another incident in this connection is worthy of note.

On September 10th, 1769, as Chairman of the Committee, he wrote the "Constitution of the old Brickerville Lutheran Church." This masterly instrument is still in force, having governed this congregation for almost a century and a-half, and within quite recent years, safely brought them through an otherwise disastrous litigation.

To this document he signed his name, Heinrich William Stiegel.

The Baron was truly a benevolent and Christian man, and while thus apparently ostentatious, he seldom used or signed his name as Baron, but yet his style and manner of living denoted royalty. When he went abroad, which he did at intervals on business, he always wore his Baronial costume. On one such trip it is said he took his family with him. The account books of Charming Forge, now in the Historical Society Archives of Philadelphia, show that several times he drew 1,000 pounds, as the means for a trip to England, but no mention has been found of his ever having revisited his favored "Manheim."

But the darker clouds of trial and business distress began at length to break over the bright days of prosperity. The Baron had lived extravagantly, and the heavy outlay demanded by his various undertakings were exhausting his financial supplies, to meet them all. A number of people had preyed on his generosity. The expensive and costly built glass works and expensive workmen were giving meagre returns. The impending war cloud of the Revolution now about to break, overshadowed and stagnated every branch of business, and failure even to collect money due proved too much for the great-hearted Baron. He made a brave effort to stem the tidal wave, and keep back the sheriff, but in vain. In October, 1774, he was incarcerated for debt.

When his numerous employees, who were devoted to him, heard of his being cast into prison for debt, they were filled with unutterable sorrow.

On the 15th of December, 1774, he wrote the following letter to his creditors from his Philadelphia prison:

"Please take notice, that I have applied to the Honorable, the House of Assembly, for a law to relieve my person from imprisonment. If you have any objections, please to appear on Thursday next at 3 o'clock in the afternoon at the gaol in this city, before the committee of grievances.

Your humble servant,

HENRY WILLIAM STEGEL."

PENNSYLVANIA BRANCH.

On Christmas Eve, 1774, Baron Stiegel stepped out of prison, once more a free man. No doubt the most appreciable Christmas gift he had ever received was this special Act of the Assembly of Pennsylvania.

After his release, numerous friends advanced him money to enable him again to start his furnace at Elizabeth. All his interests were now in the hands of others. He was compelled to give up all his possessions at Manheim, the handsome mansion, and its valuable contents, and move again to Elizabeth. There was no more extravagant living for him. His costly outfit had been sold, and he did not try to replace it. His only hope was that the faithful furnace would help him pay every dollar of his indebtedness.

At length the war broke out to his utter dismay, and seemed to take away the last ray of hope. Many of his debtors who withheld his money were among the Loyalists, and their property was confiscated. Others, even among the rich, who had been honored, feasted, and benefited by him, failed to come forth to aid him in this final effort, either by generosity or payment of just dues. And besides this, the war entirely cut off his accustomed returns from England. A gleam of hope, however, came to him in large orders from the Government for cannon, shot, and shell for the Patriotic Army. This tested the capacity of all the furnaces of the time, to their utmost ability, to supply the munitions of war. The Baron soon found the need of greater power, and he appealed to the Government for aid in digging a canal to bring water from another source a mile distant. They sent him a large number of Hessian prisoners to do this work, but to feed and care for them during the winter of 1777 greatly added to his burden of expense.

In one extremity of need he gave his gold watch as pledge for the payment of two steers and some grain to feed them. Toward the close of 1778 the Government orders ceased, and his creditors once more began pressing him for money.

He had made money on government orders, but not enough to meet all his obligations. His all absorbing thought and desire was how to satisfy all his creditors. He struggled manfully for a few brief years longer, but ruin and disaster finally overthrew the great manly Baron.

At the close of 1788, he was left penniless, with nothing left but his education. He removed his few possessions to the Lutheran parsonage at Brickerville, to become their pastor. He there taught school, and between times surveyed land, and preached on Sundays. This combined effort gave him a scanty living, and though but forty-eight years of age, his spirit was crushed, from which he was unable to rise. Some of his former employees for whose musical education he had paid, and aided in other material ways, paid him a small weekly sum for teaching their children. Many also who had listened to his earnest sermons in the other brighter days now paid towards his support out of sympathy. But where were the rich who had so often enjoyed his hospitality and substantial favors?

In 1780, he moved into one of the small tenant houses he had built for others. It is said to be still standing, and shown to visitors as his last residence—in which he taught his little school a little while longer.

Finally, the next year, he took his few scanty possessions to Charming Forge, the home then of his nephew, George Ege, where he acted as bookkeeper for the forge, and taught the children.

In 1782, his devoted wife and companion through all his prosperity, trials, privations and poverty, went to visit her relatives in Philadelphia. While there she sickened and died, and the Baron never saw her again alive. This final blow, added to his many misfortunes, caused him to lose all his spirit of enterprise, and to pine away. He died on the 10th of January, 1785, in the fifty-sixth year of his age, and according to years, still in the prime of life.

He died at the "Charming Forge Mansion," home of his nephew, George Ege, built in 1777.

A few treasured relics were left in their care and keeping, among them the plain "Gold Wedding Ring," inscribed H. W. Stiegel and Elizabeth Hölz-in, a dictionary in four languages, a Bible, and a hymn-book.

On a fly-leaf of the Bible is written in German a prayer by the Baron, evidently in the time of his adversity and great distress. These relics are now in the possession of descendants.

This life story begins and reads like a romance, and ends with heart-breaking pathos.—Compiled in part, from Dr. J. H. Sieling's address before Lancaster County Historical Society in 1896.

NOTE.

I. D. Rupp, a prolific writer and historian, who travelled from house to house through all this region collecting historic data in large measure, learned much from those then living of the Baron's life and enterprise. In his history of these counties, in which the Baron fostered his various industries, and of which the historian wrote and published about three-fourths of a century ago, he sums up as follows:

"Baron Stiegel was undoubtedly, with all his eccentricities, a man of great enterprise, of great skill in the arts, and of singular taste, as was manifest in the remarkable decoration of the interior of the Manheim mansion. He was a man of singular fortune. His vicissitudes in life were varied. In Europe a Baron, in America an iron master, glass manufacturer, a preacher, a school-master; now rich, then poor."

"Sic transit gloria hominis."

NOTE.

A MODERN CO-INCIDENCE.

In a suburb of St. Petersburg, Russia, there is one of the largest iron manufacturing plants in the world. The village, forming that suburb, is the home of the large number of operatives in that plant, and is called Stiegel, named from its founder and head, a German Baron Stiegel, who was living until quite recently—if not still.

SKETCH.

The Henkel family, as here forming a portion of the Stiegel genealogy, is one of very early history in the settlement of Pennsylvania. The Rev. Dr. Stapleton, of Jersey Shore, Pennsylvania, has recently published and copyrighted a very complete history of this family.

The original settler in Pennsylvania, from whom a long line of descendants are found in Pennsylvania and Virginia, was the Rev. Anthony Jacob Henkel, an exiled German Court Preacher. He landed in Philadelphia, in 1717, with his family, accompanied also with his son-in-law Valentine Geiger.

He must have remained in or near the city, as he was one of the first Lutheran ministers there, and founded the first Lutheran Churches in Philadelphia and Germantown. About the time of the War of the Revolution, probably a little before, some of his children settled in Augusta County, Virginia, where numerous families of the name are among the substantial and influential people of their several communities.

From this exiled minister, the Henkel family contributed able and devoted ministers in unbroken succession, down to the Rev. Socrates Henkel, of comparatively recent years, who served for about fifty years among his kinsfolk and friends, with untiring zeal and devotion, in the little historic church of his ancestors, at New Market, Virginia. He was a very influential citizen of his town and vicinity, and was universally esteemed and beloved, being especially noted for his loving service among the needy and helpless.

The "Mermaid Inn," purchased by his son, Anthony, Jr., of the first, in 1739, was the home of the widow until her death in 1744. This old inn was said to be situated on the main road to Philadelphia, most probably the road now known as Germantown Avenue. Quite recently, through the earnest and patient research of Mr. Ambrose Henkel and other relatives of New Market, Virginia, the graves of the pioneer minister and wife were found in the cemetery of St. Michael's Lutheran Church, Germantown, and have been re-interred.

KOINER SKETCH.

The history of this family, of which quite a vigorous line of the name from the Stiegel alliance is above recorded, is one of very great interest.

The Koiner ancestry, originally spelled Keinadt, has been traced back directly to the 16th century.

The American representative of the family name, Michael Keinadt, born 1720, came to Pennsylvania in his young manhood, about 1740. He settled first for some years at or near New Holland, Lancaster County, where in the records of the Lutheran Church is recorded his marriage, February 21st, 1749, to Margaret Diller, of the same county. The Diller family is one from whom a large line of descendants have been, and still are, prominent in the State. The original Keinadt German name, we find, having undergone various changes in spelling, now to be commonly spelled Koiner, and also in Virginia, Coiner.

In 1773, Michael Keinadt took up lands in Cumberland County, and a few years later the oldest son Casper, bought lands in the fertile and beautiful Shenandoah Valley in Virginia. The parents soon followed and spent their remaining days there. Homes and farms of the original families are still, after a century's possession, held by descendants. The family have been prominent and prosperous during all these eventful years, and have had no small share in the growth and influence for good in their several communities.

In March, 1892, it was determined to form an association, and to erect a monument to their early American progenitors, over their remains, which rest in the old cemetery of the church a few miles from Staunton, Va., formerly known as Keinadt's Church, now Trinity, the third built on the original site.

This was successfully accomplished, and in October, 1892, the monument was unveiled, at which a gathering of some 2000 descendants in re-union were present from several States, after which, a permanent organization was formed.

Michael Keinadt, born 1720; d. 1796. Margaret Diller, his wife, born 1734; d. 1813.

II GENERATION.

- 1-3. Adam Ege, b. 1728; d. 1803; m. 1749, Margaret Hunt,
2. daughter of Thomas Hunt, of Hopewell, N. J.

NOTE.

The Hunt family is a very old one both in England and in this country. The earliest record in England is that of Adam Le-Hunt, of Nottinghamshire in 1295, and of a Ralph Hunt, who was knighted about 1300. In America a Ralph Hunt, among other emigrants, settled on Long Island in 1652, and died there in 1677. His children were Ralph, Edward, John, Samuel, Ann and Mary.

Of these Edward was the ancestor of the numerous New Jersey descendants, whose son Thomas was the father of the wife of Adam Ege.

 ship, N. J.

NOTE.

The Schenck family in this country claim descent from Edgar de Schencken, Chief Butler to Charlemagne, who about the year 800 granted to Edgar a title of nobility, with a Coat of Arms, viz., a "Shield in the form of a Goblet," the name Schencken signifying "the Cup Bearer." The line of descent is traced from Edgar, through the Barons of Fautchberg, to Christiames, 1225, then to Wilhelmus and Ludovicus in 1346. Thence through eight direct generations to Roeliff (Ralph), who emigrated from Holland in 1650, and settled at Flatlands, Long Island. Then through three more generations to another Ralph—the father of Mary, the wife of John Ege.

hees and Maria, daughter of Uriah De Hart, Sixth Generation in line of descent from Simon De Hart, a Huguenot, who emigrated to this country in 1664, and settled on Long Island.
Abraham J. Voorhees was also in the Sixth Generation in the line of Steven Coerte Van Voorhees.

The name Van Voorkees is derived from their locality in Holland which was before the town of Hees, or Hies—the name thus signifying: from before Hees. The ancestor, Coerte Van Voorhees, was born in the early part of the 15th century. One of his sons, with a large family of grown-up children, April, 1660, emigrated from Holland and settled in Long Island.

The late Senator and Governor Voorhees, New Jersey, is of this family line. A history of the Voorhees family (of 725 pages) was published in 1888, by Elias W. Van Voorhees.

SKETCH.

The death of Ralph Ege, Aug. 7th, 1905, removed from his native town, Hopewell, N. J., a man who had been closely identified with its interests, and where his memory will be cherished as a public-spirited citizen, ever giving time and money freely for the advancement of its interests, industries, the preservation of its historic landmarks, and the uplifting of its people. He was the son of Andrew and Sarah Voorhees Ege, and was born on the farm known as Wissamenson, on the north side of Stony Brook, which had been in the possession of the Ege family since 1801. Here he spent his boyhood and the greater part of his life. From his earliest days he was fond of books and learning, and largely through his own efforts secured a liberal education, which enabled him to become a ready writer and a fluent speaker. From his boyhood days he loved the traditions of the Hopewell Valley, and was fond of relating them to ready listeners as he drove over the hills in after years. That no tradition, record or relic should be lost through his negligence seemed to be an ever-present thought, as shown by his valuable scrap books and diaries, covering nearly fifty years.

Mr. Ege was a progressive and up-to-date farmer, and deeply interested in all matters affecting the farming community, and his voice and influence were ever used in encouraging the farmers to higher appreciation of the importance and dignity of their calling, as one of the noblest and most worthy of all professions. He had been a member of the Board of Managers of the New Jersey Agricultural Experiment Station at New Brunswick, President of the Mercer County Fair Association, which grew into the Interstate Fair Association, of which he was the first Vice-President; President of the Mercer County Board of Agriculture; at one time President of the State Horticultural Society, and was appointed by Governor Abbett a delegate to represent the State at the National Farmers' Congress, at Council Bluffs, Iowa, in 1890. He was also connected with the State Agricultural College.

Mr. Ege also devoted much time and attention to local history and genealogy, and his wide reading and personal researches made the information which he possessed invaluable to the State and community. He was a member of the Hunterdon County Historical Society at the time of his death, and gave historical addresses on various occasions, one of the most notable being that at the unveiling of the Houghton Memorial in Hopewell in 1896. Mr. Ege was also interested in a great many of the organizations for the improvement of the town and people. He was prominent in Masonic circles, both in Lodge and Royal Arch Chapter of Masons.

But it was in connection with the Presbyterian Church and Sunday-school that Mr. Ege's best work was done. In early manhood he became Superintendent of the Sunday-school, which office he held for forty years. His cheerful disposition, his kindly welcome, his hearty singing, and his organizing ability won for him a large place in the hearts and lives of over a thousand children, who came under his influence during that period. At the fortieth Anniversary of the Hopewell Sunday-school, a sum of money was voted sufficient to start a Sunday-school in the West to be called "The Ralph Ege Mission Sunday-school." For many years he was an Elder in the First Presbyterian Church, of Pennington, N. J., and was instrumental in the organizing and building of a Church in Hopewell, of which he was an influential member, as Clerk of the Session, Trustee, member of the Choir, and Superintendent of the Sunday-school until his death in 1905.

NEW JERSEY BRANCH.

In 1901, he was induced to write for publication, for which his extensive reading and tireless research eminently fitted him. These began to appear, first from time to time, under the title of "Pioneers of Old Hopewell" in the "Hopewell Herald."

These articles, and others not then published, have been preserved and recently published in book form by his widow, under the title he gave them—viz., "The Pioneers of Old Hopewell."

From this volume and his Obituary, from the "Hopewell Herald," this sketch has been compiled.

NOTE.

The author is largely indebted to his friend and co-laborer, the late Ralph Ege, for aid in compiling and arranging genealogically and chronologically this entire New Jersey line of Ege descendants and allied marriages. Several years ago Ralph Ege had outlined it in a "Family Tree" of large size and great beauty.

SKETCH.

The father of Mrs. Amy Dunn Ege was Isaac Dunn, called one of the "aristocrats of Old Hopewell." He was born February 15, 1761, near New Market, where he spent his childhood. He was a Revolutionary soldier, and when about twenty years of age, came to Hopewell. He married Jerusha, daughter of Thomas Blackwell. They had two sons and nine daughters, all of whom married except the youngest daughter.

Isaac Dunn was a member of the New Jersey Assembly, was a deacon in the Old Baptist Church in 1808, and a delegate to the Philadelphia Baptist Association the same year. He was one of the few who drove to church in his chaise and colored coachman, and with his silk stockings and gold knee buckles, he created quite a sensation among the plain, old-fashioned farmers of that period. He was also one of the Charter Members of the "Hunterdon County Bible Society" in 1816, his associates on the same being Rev. John Boggs, Abraham Stout, James Stevenson, Joshua Bunn, and John Carpenter.

SKETCH.

In the genealogy of New England settlers is recorded the name of Timothy Hortman.

In 1675 he served for a brief time as a soldier in King Phillip's war, but was released, on the importunity of his wife, on the plea that he had two children to support. Said Timothy was no doubt the ancestor of the Hortman family in New Jersey—the first one of whom was Peter Hortman, a settler in Amwell Township. He was a justice of the peace, and so considered a man of usefulness and importance at that early day.

He had sons—Gabriel, a miller; Amos, a teacher, and John. One of his sisters, Christiana, was the wife of William Golden, Sr., in 1780, and Charity, another, was the wife of James Sutphin, of Amwell.

John Hortman married Achsah Humphrey, daughter of John Humphrey, Jr. After her husband's death she married Philip Riley. This brings a reference to the Humphrey family, the earliest of whom was Stephen. His son, John Humphrey, Sr., who married Achsah Larison, whose only son was John, Jr., above mentioned, and who married Experience, daughter of Isaac Dunn, of Hopewell. Isaac, Achsah, Catharine, Henry, George, Andrew, Samuel, Elizabeth, and Stephen, all allied largely with other Hopewell families.

SKETCH.

There were three Andrew Smiths in succession among the early settlers of Hopewell Township, all of whom distinguished themselves. To the oldest Andrew Smith belongs the honor of naming the township, Hopewell, in 1699. But in the published histories the oldest Andrew was overlooked, and to the second was given the credit of giving the name. The will of the first Andrew Smith was dated 1703. He left a legacy to his son, Andrew Smith, who married Sarah, daughter of Jonathan Stout, first settler.

A Samuel Smith of this family was the author of "Smith's History of New Jersey."

EGE GENEALOGY.

nence. His name appears first in the records of Southampton, Long Island, in 1641, and in October, 1644, he was one of the deputies appointed to negotiate terms of union with the New England colonies. In the same month he was appointed agent to collect subscriptions for students at Harvard College. He was licensed to preach previous to 1649, as in that year he preached at Southampton, and in the same year became the second pastor of the church at Hempstead, Long Island, later at Newtown in 1652, and while still pastor there died September, 1657.

Rev. Mr. Moore had married, either before or soon after the emigration, Margaret, the daughter of Edward Howell, of Wedon, County of Bucks, England.

She was of the noted Howell family of Wales and England, from whom all the Howells in America are descended, and can trace their ancestry back one thousand years.

Edward Howell, the father of Margaret, came to America about the same time. He located first for a short time at Lynn, Massachusetts, where he is recorded as having taken up 500 acres of land. He removed to Southampton, Long Island, in 1640, and was one of its founders and a member of the Governor's Council of Connecticut. His death occurred about 1655. He had a son, John, who was also prominent in civil and military affairs of Southampton.

Margaret, the wife of Rev. John Moore, and her brother, John, were both born at Marsh Gibbon, in the parish of Weygate, County of Bucks, England. Margaret was baptized there November 24, 1622, and her brother, John, November 20, 1624. He died November 3, 1696, and the Howell Coat of Arms is engraved on his tombstone at Southampton.

Rev. John Moore and Margaret Howell left a family of five children as the basis of a very long line of descendants. Nathaniel Moore, a grandson, was the pioneer settler in Hopewell Township, 1708. Many descendants of the Howell name also, through numerous alliances and for the past two centuries, have been among the distinguished families of the country.—Compiled from "Hopewell Pioneers."

SKETCH.

Conrah Marshall, as far as known, was the first of this family in Hopewell Township, born 1729; died 1813. He settled near Pennington, on a farm on the top of "Witchamenting" Mountain. He left one son, John; perhaps others. John, born 1762, died 1808, was twice married; first wife, Rebecca, daughter of John Hart, son of the first John Hart, of Hopewell. He left four children—Philip, William, John and Rebecca—from whom there were many descendants. Another John of this family, born 1793, died 1832, married Charity Golden, daughter of Captain Golden. She was left with six sons and three daughters. In 1842, when her youngest was but ten years old, she followed others of her family and quite a company to Cordova, Illinois, and purchased a large tract of virgin prairie land. Her children settled here, the sons becoming farmers and the daughters marrying, and where still many descendants remain and are influential citizens.

SKETCH.

The Van Buskirk name appears both as surname and Christian name in several family connections in this genealogy. Many of the German, Danish and Holland names of the early emigrants to this country had very interesting and significant meanings, among them that of Van Buskirk is specially striking, meaning "the Church in the Woods." The spelling of the name has changed from the original Boskerek to Boskirk, and finally Buskirk, as now adopted and used.

The original settler, Lourens Andriessen Van Boskerek, came from Holstein, Holland, in the summer of 1655. His name first appears in the records of New Amsterdam June 29, 1656, in the deed for a lot on Broad Street. He was then unmarried and a turner by trade, afterwards becoming a draper. Later he purchased a tract of land at Minhakwa, now Greenville, N. Y. He took the oath of allegiance the 29th of November, 1665. He married September 12, 1658, Janetje Jans, widow of Christian Barentsen, with four sons. She brought him a fortune. They both died in 1694. They had four sons—Audries, Lourens, Jr., Pieter, and Thomas. From these a long line of descendants continued the name to the present day.—From Chambers "Early Germans."

SKETCH.

William Snook, of Holland, was the ancestor of this family, who came into the Hopewell region with other Dutch emigrants through the Raritan Valley to Somerset County. He was naturalized in 1730, probably very soon after his arrival. He did not settle long among his Holland friends, but came to Hunterdon County and took up a tract of land at the confluence of Rocky and Stony brooks of about 800 acres, where he built his cabin, and with the aid of his four sons, John, Philip, George and William, improved a farm of 500 acres of this tract. His son, Philip, was commissioned as captain in the Revolutionary Army in 1776, and was a very brave and daring officer.

The father died in 1760 and left a widow, four sons and five daughters, who soon were married and left large families of descendants. Some left for other localities—Captain Philip to western Pennsylvania. Others of the name are still in the vicinity.

SKETCH.

Like many other families who settled in the Seventeenth Century in New Jersey from England, Holland and France, and who trace their ancestry to earlier centuries, the Sexton family claim the same antiquity. Allan Hale Sexton, of Albany, N. Y., in this family research visited the British Isles and found authentic records back as far as between 1400 and 1500 A. D.

The first of the family is said to have been George Sexton, who emigrated from England in 1663, and died at Westfield, Connecticut, in 1690. George, Jr., crossed over into Huntington, Long Island, in 1689. Charles, son of George, Jr., born at Huntington about 1690, was married twice. He mentioned fourteen children in his will. Many of these were born and some, married in Long Island, no doubt remained there. The said Charles came to Hopewell about 1745 and settled on a portion of the Dr. Parke's original tract. In his will, dated January 24, 1751, he mentions his six sons and eight daughters, viz.: Charles, Jr., George, Joseph, Nathaniel, Nehemiah, Jared, Japath, Hannah Platt, Sarah Hallock, Esther Rogers, Elizabeth Adams, Keziah Brush, Bathsheba Hill, Mabel Stout.

NEW JERSEY BRANCH.

One of the most prominent of this family name during his active and useful life in his community, preceding and during the Revolutionary period, is that of Judge Jared Sexton. He was born in 1737; married March 28, 1768, Annie, daughter of James Larison. He is noted as a skillful and trusted administrator and executor in the settlement of estates of his friends and neighbors in his community.

After the death of the Hon. John Hart, in 1799, who had been Surrogate Judge of Hunterdon County and was the first member of the Legislature from the Hopewell district, and until his death, Jared Sexton was elected as his successor in the Legislature. At the expiration of his term he was appointed judge in the Court of Common Pleas, which he filled with ability until his death in 1785. Charles Sexton was a Revolutionary soldier.

SKETCH.

Augustus Titus Ege was the only son of Titus Ege and Mary Runkle and great-grandson of Adam Ege, an early Hopewell settler. He resided on a farm of the ancestral estate and was a very active man, not only in his agricultural pursuits, but equally active and influential in the community in its civic interests. The character of Mr. Augustus Ege stands as a model for the young men of his day. His word was as good as his bond, and when he said yes he meant it from the bottom of his heart. His political life, in which he was prominent, was an untarnished record of integrity and honesty. His every promise and pledge was fulfilled to the letter, and always for the best good of his country and community. He served his country as freeholder and township collector with the utmost fidelity, without spot of reproach or censure, and then when nominated to serve as sheriff of Mercer County, of which Trenton, the Capitol of the State, was also the county seat, he was elected by nearly 4,000 plurality, and from his township the largest vote ever received by any candidate for any office.

In his sudden and unexpected death a man valuable in public and private life was taken away, universally esteemed and mourned for by a very wide circle of friends and relatives.

His end was truly pathetic. On a Monday morning in March, 1904, he left his home in his usual good health and spirits. He went first to Hopewell to attend a meeting of the directors of the Hopewell National Bank, of which he was a member, after which he went to Trenton to attend to some business with his friend, Surrogate Cornell, and when he reached his office, learned that he was ill and confined to his bed.

A telephone message and reply bade him call and have an interview. After dining with a friend he went to the Surrogate's residence, and while in the act of being assisted to remove his overcoat by Mrs. Cornell, who welcomed him, he was about to take a step on the stairs, when death came instantly, and the life-long friends failed to have their interview or see each other again in life.

NEW JERSEY BRANCH.

His funeral service was largely attended by many representative men of all professions in the country and a great company of sympathizing and mourning friends. He was interred at Harbourton, among the resting places of many of his ancestral line.

He left a wife and their two children to mourn his loss—
J. Mason Ege and Mrs. Henry B. Pittenger.

His son is a successful merchant in Hopewell and bids fair to follow the active and useful civic career of his father. He succeeded his father as director of the National Bank. His name has been before the people of his township for election to various offices and has never suffered defeat; has served a second term in the Board of Freeholders, as chairman of committees, and last year director of the board, and prominent for position in State Board of Road Commissions.

SKETCH.

Mr. Ege was a native of New Jersey and quite early in life embarked in business in New York City, but made his home in Jersey City, and soon identified himself with its interests. He was a most estimable citizen, a prosperous merchant and a very careful and successful man in business. He was the senior member of the firm of Ege & Otis, large wholesale dealers in leading staple articles of general food supplies for the great and growing city of New York. In his dealings with his fellow-merchants he had made a reputation for himself by his probity and truthfulness worthy of the commendation and emulation of all business men. He was naturally of a retiring disposition, and could not be induced to accept conspicuous places of trust and responsibility which he was well able to fill. His large business demands made it obligatory to become a member of the Produce Exchange, and could have filled important positions therein had he been willing to accept them. He was elected to membership in the Jersey City Board of Aldermen from 1862 to 1870, and President of the Board in 1868. For many years he was one of the directors of the Bank of Jersey City, and when it was reorganized as the Second National Bank was again chosen to the same office and continued to serve as such up to the time of his death.

NEW JERSEY BRANCH.

He was a staunch temperance man, both as an advocate in its cause and its practice in life. He was held in high esteem in the Hedding Methodist Church, of which he was an active member, and which he served in almost every official position, being especially effective as Sunday-school Superintendent. Throughout Hudson County Mr. Ege was as generally known for his identification with the church of his choice as for his successful business energy and public spirit. His death left gaps in many circles. His influential course for the good of his city and community while in its board caused his name to be placed on one of its streets.

He was a sufferer for several years from a malignant or cancerous tumor in his head, which finally caused his death in 1886. His devoted wife, who was Miss Margaret Reed, passed to her rest several years before him, a victim of tuberculosis. In her health and vigor she was also an active member of the Hedding M. E. Church and greatly beloved by her associate members. Her death was a great loss to the poor, to whom her aid and sympathy was ever manifested in their need and affliction.

Her amiable disposition and entire lack of false pride, with her desire ever to do good, made her a valuable acquisition to her church and society, in both of which her sad death was a felt loss.

Jacob W. Ege, the only son of Horatio Ege, was long associated in business with his father, and continued in the same for some years after his father's death. He was taken off in the very prime of life in the forty-fourth year of his age by an acute attack of gastritis and very brief illness.

He was well known in his native city and very popular among his business associates and many genial friends. The news of his sudden death was a great shock to his family and friends. He left a wife and two children to specially mourn his loss.

SKETCH.

Col. John Reed, of Cornwall, England, came to America in 1660, and probably settled on Long Island, where there were members of a Reed family in 1652.

One Thomas Reed built a house for the Church of England minister at Middleburg in 1656.

John Reed, probably a son of one of these, came to northern Hopewell from Long Island about 1706. He and his wife and family resided on the hill between Marshall's Corner and Woodsville. He was born in 1675 and his wife in 1680. He died in 1731 and his wife in 1765, leaving a long line of descendants, who still appear by name in many families and in the records of many recorded here. This family is one of great antiquity. The name is traced far back in English history to the Celtic race.

SKETCH.

The Larison family, of Hopewell Township and vicinity, New Jersey, is a very large one and allied by marriage with almost every family or descendants thereof of the early pioneers of this section. According to the tradition of the older Larisons their ancestor, John Larison (Jon Larsen) was a Danish nobleman, who was compelled to flee from Denmark and lose his estates by confiscation because of taxes in 1660. He fled first to Scotland, and hearing that a large reward had been offered for his capture he went over to Ireland for a time and finally emigrated to America, leaving grown sons in Ireland, where they married and remained. Arriving in America John Larison, the Dane, purchased a large tract of about 1,700 acres on Long Island, near Brooklyn. His name is found on a rate list of Newtown, Long Island, in 1683. On May 22, 1683, John Larison, Jr., and Jemima Halsey were married at Newtown, and on December 20, 1686, a John Larison, also of Newtown, married Mary Howell, a widow. She was probably the second wife of John, Sr., the

EGE GENEALOGY.

Dane. Her first husband is thought to have been the brother of Margaret Howell, who married the Rev. John Moore.

William Larison, of John, the Dane, came to Hopewell with a great migration of Newtown families.

Tradition says that of the six sons of John, Sr., two were killed by Indians, George settled in Pennsylvania, William in Hopewell and others settled near Chester, in Morris County, where John, the Sr., spent his last days and found his last resting place.

John, the Dane, had a very superior education and gave his children the best advantages available at that time, so that, in addition to their employ in agriculture, they were a race of school teachers and in active business as well. This fact made its impress on the generations following, among whom have been shrewd business men, educators and leaders in their respective communities.—Compiled from "Hopewell Pioneers."

Among them Broad Street Church, Trenton; Simpson Memorial, Long Branch (five years), during which pastorate a handsome church was built and dedicated free of debt; First Church, New Brunswick (six years), where the work was greatly enlarged, both in membership and material gifts, in new buildings and equipment—$15,000 being given as a memorial to this end in memory of Robert M. Clare; Bethany Church, Camden (five years) and now at Collingwood, New Jersey, entering upon the third year of his pastorate there. His phenomenal success in evangelistic work has added hundreds to the membership of these various charges.

SKETCH.

The first of the Golden family name, which appears so frequently both by Christian and surname among descendants of this family genealogy, is that of William, who in a group of several families arrived in Boston in 1640.

William Golden is enrolled among the Massachusetts Baptists who were banished from the colony at the time of the Puritans' persecution. In company with several others he left Massachusetts in the summer of 1643 and came to Gravesend, Long Island.

William Golden there became a large land owner and also on Manhattan Island, a portion of which now in the heart of New York City was long known as Golden's Hill.

Among the freeholders of Gravesend in 1656 are the names of William Golden, Joseph Golden, Richard Stout and others, whose descendants afterward became the pioneers of Hunterdon County, N. J.

In 1698 Joseph Golden was registered in Long Island as an Englishman. Not long after the Goldens, father and son, all settled in Monmouth County, New Jersey. There, in 1704, Joseph purchased a farm of 130 acres near the village of Marlboro, and later another tract of 90 acres in East Jersey, in which transaction the names of Joseph, Sr., and Joseph Golden, Jr., were signed.

William Golden is recorded in a history of Monmouth County as having become a permanent resident there, and with Richard Stout and others founded the Middletown Baptist Church.

NEW JERSEY BRANCH.

In 1734 Joseph Golden, Jr., purchased 200 acres in Hopewell Township from Thomas Houghton, thus becoming a pioneer there and a permanent settler.

These early Goldenes were enterprising farmers and land lovers, adding to their holdings from time to time, dividing and devising them to the following generations, some of which names and farms are owned by descendants to this day.

The Golden family, of Hopewell, were not only among the pioneers, but also one of the patriot families of the Revolutionary period; all four of the sons of Joseph, Jr., who were living at that time were enrolled in the Continental army.—"Pioneers of Old Hopewell."

SKETCH.

Daniel Dilts, tradition says, was one of two brothers, Harmon and Daniel, who came to this country about 1700. A Dilts of another family came over with Daniel from Germany, who sold his time to Daniel and afterwards married his daughter. Daniel,

EGE GENEALOGY.

1st, had a son, Daniel, 2nd, and probably Morris. Daniel, 2nd, b. 1741; d. 1827; m. Rebecca Merlett, b. 1743; d. 8, 7, 1832.

In 1802 Daniel, 2nd, bought (173) acres of land on Schooley's Mountain, above Middle Valley, later the Geo. Lindabury farm.

Both Daniel, 2nd, and Morris had children, from which a large line of descendants have followed to this day.—See Chambers "Early Germans of New Jersey."

The recent death of Dr. Stiles M. Woodburn, of Towanda, Pa., prompts this brief sketch, uniting as it does the Ege-Woodburn alliance of the Pennsylvania branch and the Dilts-Ege alliance of the New Jersey branch.

Dr. Woodburn was born June 20, 1850, in Newville, Pa., son of John and Isabella Dunlap Woodburn.

The ancestor of this large family was James Woodburn and wife, Margaret Martin. James was of Scotch-Irish lineage, born 1764, and came to America in 1788 and settled in the beautiful and fertile Cumberland Valley, where many of the descendants still reside, and where Dr. Woodburn spent his early life. He was educated in the common schools and in the Pennsylvania State College. He graduated in medicine in 1872 and settled in Towanda, Pa., where he began and continued in the practice of his profession until his recent death. In 1871 he married Margaret E. Dilts, of Ringoes, N. J., b. March 3, 1845—daughter of Leonard K. Dilts, b. April 18, 1812; d. April 9, 1864, and Elizabeth B. Robbins, b. June 6, 1807; d. April 2, 1866; m. January 10, 1832. Both the Dilts and Robbins families were from old original settlers in New Jersey and variously allied with Ege descendants. Mary K. Dilts, an older sister of Mrs Stiles M. Woodburn, was also allied by marriage with the same Woodburn family, her husband being the Rev. J. S. Woodburn, now deceased, and the uncle of the doctor.

Dr. Woodburn was a member of the Presbyterian Church, a member of State and County Medical Societies, represented the State Board of Health, was Pension Examiner for nine years, and a member of Town Council. In the forty years of his residence in Towanda he was one of the foremost men in all lines of advancement. He was truly an ideal man, in whom all confidence was ever placed. He leaves a heritage that will outlast all the monuments that could be placed over his resting place.

He is survived by his widow and two children, Dr. Charles M. Woodburn, of Towanda, and Mrs. Charles H. Pearce, of Binghamton, N. Y.

The maiden name Martin of the first ancestress of the Woodburn family in Pennsylvania has been perpetuated through successive generations to living descendants of this day. There have been four John Martin Woodburns in direct line for four generations. The Woodburn-Ege alliance is represented by seventeen families and the Ege-Woodburn by twenty-five. The children of these two early marriages numbered twenty-five and were therefore double first cousins. The two Ege names of these alliances here named were first cousins of the father of the writer—T. P. E.

SKETCH.

Among the persecuted Huguenots who fled from France about 1665 and found an asylum in England was one "Chambellon."

Owing to the great fire in London in 1666 the refugee removed to Ireland. Like many other Huguenots he changed his French name for an English equivalent, viz., Chamberlin.

The tradition in the older family was that three sons of the refugee came to America about the beginning of the 18th Century, the ancestor of Col. William Chamberlin settling in Hunterdon County.

Col. Chamberlin was born September 25, 1736, and was married four times and was the father of twenty-five children, the youngest of which was Moses, born November 8, 1812, and who was still living as late as 1900, probably a short time later. The eventful lifetime of father and son embracing a period of one hundred and sixty-four years at that date.

Col. Chamberlin was a brave soldier and rendered valuable service in the Revolutionary struggle, being Lieutenant Colonel of the 2nd Regiment, Hunterdon County Volunteers, and was in frequent battles and skirmishes.

At the battle of Germantown, October 3-4, 1777, he had a sad experience. His oldest son, Lewis, then eighteen years of age, went to visit his father on some business, and learning that a battle was about to take place decided to remain with his father, and though not an enlisted soldier took a position in his father's regiment and went into action with it. During the engagement he was struck on the knee with a spent cannon ball and for the want of prompt surgical attention he died on the field.

In 1791 Col. Chamberlin removed from New Jersey to Buffalo, Valley, Union County, Pa., where he purchased 600 acres of land. He died August 21, 1817, aged eighty-one years. A marble shaft marks his resting place in the cemetery at Lewisburg, Pa.

Some of his numerous posterity married and remained in New Jersey, but others followed the father and were soon scattered in other localities.

An incident worthy of mention occurred during his Revolutionary experience. "The Colonel owned a mill near Clover Hill, Hunterdon County, which was burned by a foraging party of the British in 1776, and they pressed his colored man and a team into service to drive a wagon loaded with ammunition. The man pretended that he could not manage his team and told the officers that the horses were not accustomed to being driven behind other teams, but if they were put in the lead they would be more manageable. The officers then placed him in front, and coming soon to a long descending hill he whipped his horses into a run and succeeded in taking the load into the American lines, which were not far distant, although the bullets fell thick and fast around him as long as he was within range."—From Penna. "State Library at Harrisburg and Hope-well Pioneers."

HISTORIC SKETCH.

The Stouts of New Jersey are descended from John Stout, of Nottinghamshire, England, whose son, Richard Stout, emigrated to Long Island about 1640. Richard married Penelope Van Princes, a widow, who with her husband, Van Princes, sailing from Holland, was stranded near Sandy Hook. Her husband having been ill on the voyage was unable to travel farther, and being attacked by Indians was killed. His wife was badly wounded, but managed to find shelter in a hollow log, where she was found by a friendly Indian, who cared for her and treated her wounds until her recovery.

Richard Stout was one of the patentees of Gravesend, Long Island, in 1745, and in 1765 was one of twelve to whom the Monmouth patent was granted, he thus becoming one of the original permanent settlers of Monmouth County, New Jersey.

Richard, b. in England; d. 1705. His wife, Penelope, b. in Holland 1620; d. 1712. In Richard's will, dated June 9, 1703, he mentions "his sons, John, Richard, James, Jonathan, David and Benjamin; his daughters, Mary, Alice and Sarah; his daughter-in-law, Mary Stout, and her son, John, and his 'kins-woman,' Mary Stout, daughter of Peter Stout."

Jonathan, the 4th son, who married Anna Bollen, was the pioneer of the family in Hopewell Township, whose descendants carrying down the name have been more than numerous and more or less allied with every prominent family of the early settlers and their descendants to the present day.

The family preceded the Revolutionary days and gave their full share of devotion to the great and heroic struggle of Independence.

Among the sons of Jonathan were Col. Joseph Stout and Captain David. His oldest, John, was the father of three other patriot sons, Nathan, Moses, Abraham and his son, Solomon Abraham, and son fought side by side at the battle of White Plains, in which Solomon was killed by a shell. NOTE.

Rev. J. E. Baker, while attending school at Amenia Seminary, became a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, September, 1852. In March, 1854, was licensed to exercise his gifts as a preacher and sent to Mt. Zion Church in New Jersey. Entered the Wisconsin Conference in 1857, in which he labored for several years. In 1868 was transferred to the upper Iowa Conference, in which he continued in active ministry until 1896, when he took a superannuate relation. He now resides in La Cygne, Kansas, in a ripe old age, and is still able to serve the church when called upon frequently for supply work and to officiate on funeral occasions. His large family of children as follows:

when he took a superannuate relation at the Conference of that year, and died two weeks later. Rev. Mr. Walton was a native of Bucks County, Pennsylvania. During his ministry of forty-six years he was very successful in the various demands of the Church and the advancement of Christ's Kingdom in the world. He received over a thousand members into the branch of the Church he so well represented. He raised for building purposes about $27,000, for missions over $83,000 and many dollars for other claims, and thus fully merited the "Well done! good and faithful servant" of "the Master." SKETCH.

Alliances of this widely extended family with that of both early and later generations of Adam Ege deserve this mention, and especially because among the alliances represented and recorded in this history and genealogy the Hart name heads forty-four families of descendants.

This notable family is descended from a John Hart of England, who settled first quite early in Massachusetts and later in Newtown, Long Island. His will, proved in 1761, names a family of five children. The oldest son, John, of the next generation was a resident of what is now Lawrenceville, N. J. By his wife, Mary, he left sons, John, Ralph, Nathaniel, Edward and Joseph, and probably daughters.

By the will of Nathaniel, dated January 22, 1742, he names these brothers, and appoints his brother, Joseph, and John, son of his brother, Edward, as executors of said will.

Edward, the fourth son above mentioned, became a very important and useful citizen in church and colonial affairs in Hopewell and region of this part of the State. He was also an early soldier in its defence. He was commissioned June 25, 1746, by colonial authorities to raise a company of one hundred men to undertake an expedition against the subjects of the French King at Canada. He named this company the "Jersey Blues."

The Hon. John Hart, now always referred to as "Signer of the Declaration of Independence," was the son of Captain Edward. Hon. John Hart was born sometime before 1714, at which time, February 14th, his baptism is of record. He died when "about 67 years," as record states. His will was dated April 16, 1779, and proved May 26, 1779. His Bible recorded the death of his wife, doubtless written by himself, as follows: "October 20, 1776. Departed this life, in the 55th year of her age, Deborah, wife of John Hart, who left twelve children and twenty-two grandchildren behind her."

NEW JERSEY BRANCH.

The history of the life and times of the Hon. John Hart has been fully written, and so needs only brief reference here. He was well educated for the stirring times in which he lived, and distinguished by his useful and active career in the welfare of the community, in church and colonial affairs. Besides his active business interests, his large farm and large share in the mills and manufactures of his vicinity, and from the fact of his name being so frequently seen on public documents, is evidence of his prominence, ability and usefulness. Previous to his public life as a politician, he was much in demand in the settlement of the estates of his neighbors and in the discharge of his duties in the minor offices of counsel and advice, which invariably fell to the lot of every enterprising and public-spirited citizen.

He was elected to the Colonial Legislature in 1761, and from that time on and during the Revolutionary period, until his death in 1779, his time and service were devoted to public affairs. His private business and care of farm, homestead and mills was largely left to the conduct of his oldest sons, Jesse and Nathaniel.

Ten of the children named married and had families, and a few years after his death the sons left their native homes and scattered to other lands, settling in Western Virginia, Pennsylvania and Kentucky, making history therein; some of them becoming very successful in business and others distinguished as politicians and statesmen.

Edward, the 3rd son of Hon. John Hart, settled in Virginia. His daughter, Deborah Hart, married Major William Booth, of Virginia, a soldier in the War of 1812, and their daughter, Harriet L. Booth, married General Peter Ege, Civil War, of the Pennsylvania branch, and a cousin of the author.—T. P. EGE.

SKETCH.

The Blackwells are of English origin, and must have been of considerable importance in England, as no less than six towns in the realm bear the name of Blackwell. A "Coat of Arms" also bear evidence of the same.

Robert Blackwell was the first ancestor of the name in America. He settled first at the town now known as Elizabeth, N. J., where he engaged in merchandise in 1676. About that time he married a daughter of Capt. John Manningham, of Manning's Island, in the East River, of which island and farm he later became the owner, and settled there.

From him it soon became known as "Blackwell's Island," and still after two centuries retains the name.

Robert Blackwell, Jr., early settled at Newtown, and about 1700 settled at Hopewell. His son, Francis, later owning mills and land there, which became the property in line of his son, Rev. John Blackwell, a Baptist minister in Hopewell. The descendants of the name have been numerous and became influential citizens, continuing so to the present time.

SKETCH.

The large family of Hoagland name in the counties of Hunterdon and Somerset, N. J., are descended from Christopher Hoagland, of Haarlem, Holland, an early emigrant to New Amsterdam (New York). He married Katrina Krieger, also of Holland, June 28, 1661, in New York, where their marriage is of record, and also the births of their several children.

Some of his children, about 1700, settled on the branches of the Raritan River in the counties above named, where they took up large tracts of land. Among the names of those specially mentioned are Amos Hoagland, a great-grandson of Christopher, who settled in Hopewell Township, and married Mary, daughter of John Titus, and their son, John Hoagland, who married Sarah, daughter of John Stout, and their son, John Stout Hoagland, who married Rebecca A. Mershon, daughter of Joab Mershon, all of which names are closely allied with Ege descendants herein recorded.—From partial footnote "Hopewell Pioneers."

SKETCH.

The ancestor of the Titus family in America was Robert Titus, of Stanstead Abbey, of Hertfordshire, England. Silius Titus, a noted English soldier and politician (b. 1623; d. 1704), was probably a son or brother's son of Robert. The name Silas, from the Latin Silius, is frequent among the Titus name in this country. Silius claimed to be of Italian descent and of the same family as the Roman Emperor, who was the instrument in the hands of God in the fulfillment of prophecy in the destruction of Jerusalem, A. D. 70.

Silius was captain in the regiment of Colonel Ayloffé and took part in the siege of Donogton Castle, in Hertfordshire, in 1644. He was an ardent Presbyterian, as were the early family here, which seems also to point to this English source.—“Dictionary of Biography, London, 1898.”

Robert Titus and his wife, Hannah, of this line emigrated to America in the spring of 1635, landing at Boston, and settled in Weymouth, Mass. “Ship Hopewell, Captain Bunlock: Robert Titus, age 35; his wife, Hannah, age 31, and their children, John, age 8, and Edmund, age 5.”—Emigrant Records.

Four other children, born in this country, were Samuel, Abiel, Content and Susannah. Of these Content, b. 3, 28, 1743, was commissioned as captain by the Crown 12, 30, 1689. He settled at Newtown, Long Island, where he filled many offices of trust and responsibility. He was also a ruling Elder in the Presbyterian Church. His son, John, came to New Jersey among the first pioneers of Hopewell and settled at Stony Point, near Pennington. His son, John, Jr., was the father of Anna Titus, the wife of Samuel Ege, son of Adam.—From "Pioneers of Old Hopewell," by Ralph Ege.

Hannah Ege, a sister of Samuel, also married in the Titus family, and among Titus descendants along line follows throughout this New Jersey branch of Ege alliance and relationship.

OBITUARY.

The Presbytery of New Brunswick, in session at Frenchtown, N. J., June 27, 1905, unanimously adopted the following Obituary of our departed brother prepared by Rev. Dr. Walter A. Brooks, and ordered to be entered in full upon our Minutes, and a copy to be sent to the family of the deceased.

Attest:

A. L. ARMSTRONG,
Stated Clerk.

The Rev. Albert Clark Titus was born in Trenton, October 9, 1847, of a family long identified with the Presbyterian Church. He made his confession in Christ in the First Church of Trenton, April 13, 1866, at the age of eighteen. He prepared for college in the Trenton Academy and the State Normal School and graduated from the College of New Jersey in 1869. He then entered Princeton Theological Seminary and graduated with the class of 1872.

He was licensed by this Presbytery April 10, 1872, and receiving a call to the church of Newport, Pa., was ordained and installed by the Presbytery of Carlisle as pastor of that church on July 9, 1872. He fulfilled a useful pastorate of three years in Newport, and in 1876, receiving a call, he removed to the Presbyterian church at Andover, New York. After a service of four years he was recalled to Trenton, his native home, to assist his brothers in the conduct of the manufacturing business left in their hands by the death of their father. He relinquished the active service of the ministry with great regret, but felt it his duty, as the oldest son, to devote himself to the care of the family interests. On his return to Trenton he associated himself with the Fourth Presbyterian Church, in whose pulpit he frequently preached, and of whose Sabbath-school became for a time a true and faithful superintendent. In the past few years he was in the congregation, and a helper in the work of the Prospect Street Church, where he conducted a class of boys and young men in the Sabbath-school, and where his participation in the prayer meetings of the church were especially helpful.

An affection of the heart made his last year a time of much weakness and suffering, but patiently borne. He died May 1, 1905, leaving a record of unassuming and faithful service for the Lord, whom he loved.

- (9-7). George Ege, 1st, 3. Adam, I Bernhard.
(9-7). George Ege, 1st, b. 11, 16, 1767; d. 1835; m. 1st 1782, Mary 1219. Quick, daughter of John Quick.

SKETCH.

John Quick, the elder son of Francis. John Quick married Elizabeth Stout, daughter of Benjamin and Ruth (Bogart) Stout. Moses Quick, the son of John, married Sarah Sexton, daughter of Judge Jared Sexton, of Hopewell. Between the years 1795 and 1840 Moses Quick was a very extensive dealer in real estate, his name appearing very frequently on the land records of the vicinity. There were numerous descendants of this Quick family—names of other Johns, Benjamin and Levi being frequent. Mary Quick, of John, mentioned above, was the wife of George Ege, son of Adam, the Ege ancestor of the Hopewell region.

NOTE.

James Henry Ege, of the Pennsylvania Branch, now resident of Minneapolis, ex-Sheriff of Hennepin County, Minnesota; at present (1911) Sergeant-at-Arms of the State Senate and a cousin of the author of this genealogy; married Margaret Catharine Quick, daughter of Benjamin Stout Quick, at that time residing in Lancaster County, Pa.; also on the maternal side of the author in the Dodson family is a John Bird Quick by marriage, with quite a family of children.
